Assumes State Role Now

Dianne 'Did Best' in Miss American Event

Disappointed, but looking forward to her year as Miss California, Dianne Wagner of Daly City returned on Monday from Atlantic City's Miss America pageant won by brown-eyed Terry Anne Meeuwsen of Depere, Wis.

Miss Wagner will participate in the Serramonte Shopping Center's fourth anniversary celebration fashion show at 11 a.m. Saturday. All North County beauty queens will be present.

Dianne told the California contingent that she felt she had done her best, and could offer no explanation for not making top-ten in the pageant.

She was due home this afternoon at International Airport via TWA. A press conference was planned signifying the start of her year of activity in the Miss California role.

There was no clue as to Dianne's failure to win the slightest nod from the judges; she was, however, questioned so sharply in her interview about Angela Davis and the Attica prison riots by one judge that an official came to her afterward and apologized, Times' correspondents at the scene learned.

Dianne had responded that she felt the state had spent a great deal of money to assure a fair trial and she felt that justice was served. Other girls were asked more customary questions, they said.

She performed her classic ballet flawlessly in the Friday night outing.

The talent category was captured, however, by the new Miss America, who for two years has been a singer with the New Christy Minstrels.

Dianne's gown was an original by Emma Domb of San Francisco. Her blonde hair was enriched by the parrot green costume. It was sleeveless, with low back, and thin straps and fitted choice beaded with aurora borealis stones. The skirt was of several layers of chiffon, the top layer sprinkled with the stones.

DIANNE WAGNER of Daly City will assume her role as Miss California after Miss America pageantry "disappointment." Miss Wagner will model fashions at Serramonte Shopping Center, which provided photo, on Saturday.

Shriver, Housewife Check Food Prices

By JACK BIK

Democratic vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver and a Daly City housewife toured a Serramonte Shopping Center supermarket Monday, comparing meat prices with 1969 prices.

Both were abashed at the increase. Mrs. Margarita Cordero of Daly City brought along a 1969 newspaper ad from the QFI market showing prices and she and Sriver followed by 50 or more newsmen ticked off comparisons.

They discovered that sirloin steaks were $1.09 in 1969 and $1.49 today; frying chickens, 35 cents a pound then, 52 cents today; lamb patties, 39 cents then, 69 cents now and ground round 89 cents in 1969 and $1.19 now.

QFI president Leo Musso countered the criticism by stating, "I pay the highest wages in the country." He said his workers earn $5.85 per hour plus fringe benefits.

Shriver smilingly stated, "You run a great store. It is too bad that the prices must go up."

Mrs. Cordero said that her husband is an electrical worker and that she recently lost her job. "It costs now the same to feed my husband and myself as what it did to feed eight people three years ago."

Shriver chatted with shoppers including many mothers who had brought their children. He then left for San Francisco International Airport for a campaign flight.

He also said today the Palestinian Arabs must be included in any peace solution to the Mideast conflict.

"It is not possible to get a meaningful peace in the Mideast without giving some serious consideration to the Palestinian Arabs," he said in a television interview. "Any peace plan must include the Israelis, Egypt and any Arab faction. This can be done either under the auspices of the United Nations or under an international organization that might include Russia and the involved powers."

Shriver, defending Sen. George McGovern's vote to send airplanes to Israel at the outbreak of the Mideast conflict, said "McGovern is not a pacifist.

"Mr. McGovern was one of the first to advocate sending planes for the defense of Israel," he said. "But the difference between the situation in the Mideast and in Vietnam is great. Israel is in a totally different strategic position in the Mediterranean than a country on the tip of the Asian continent."

Pacifica to Plan Harbor At Rockaway

Pacifica's city council last night voted to authorize Lampman and Associates to develop a plan for a small boat harbor at Rockaway Beach.

Cost of the plan could go as high as $360,000, it was reported, but Acting City Manager Dwight French said that sources other than taxes will be sought to help pay for the planning.

French suggested that various state and federal funds are available, both for drawing up plans and for construction. The plans are essential for obtaining construction grants, he said.

Councilman Nick Gust said that he wished the public to be aware that, should efforts to obtain outside funds be unsuccessful, the city might have to raise its tax rate by four cents, for five years, in order to raise $100,000.

Councilmen acted on a "reconnaissance study" done by Lampman and Associates, municipal planning and engineering consultant headquartered in Sacramento.

Lampman's study considered two sites in Pacifica as suitable for such a harbor — San Pedro Point and Rockaway Beach. The 15-page study made these points:

1. There is a growing demand for new boating facilities in this area.
2. There is at present poor access to ocean waters in the San Francisco area.
3. Although Pillar Point Harbor at Half Moon Bay will provide 1100 berths within three years, and 1600 berths later, it would still be inadequate for the demand.
4. Pacifica is closest to fishing grounds.
5. Breakwaters would have to be built at either Pacifica site;

JESD 'Gag Rule' Stirs an Angry Debate at Meet

By FRANK LAPIERRE

A moment of silence was observed at the start of last week's meeting of the Jaffe sch Elementary School District Board of Trustees.

Chairman Albert Collett asked for the tribute in memory of those Israeli Olympians who died in Munich earlier this week.

A few short minutes later, however, a proposed policy concerning the public's conduct at board meetings sparked angry reaction from the floor and from within their own ranks.

David Parker, resident of the district, pointed out that the policy was tantamount to a "gag rule" and legal ramifications would tear the policy apart if it were applied to the public's right to speak.

Parker said the prior board encouraged residents to speak out on issues and now this policy has been reversed by the current board majority.

"Even the President and Congress (of the United States) are subject to criticism," he said.

One section of the new policy, adopted by trustees Edward Tomasello, Albert Collett and James Cranna, forbids persons from initiating verbal charges or complaints "against individual employes of the district at a public meeting of the board."

Superintendent Frank L. Greenwood and his associate, Roger Barthuli, had come in for scalding criticism from the floor during meetings in recent months. This will no longer be permitted under the adopted policy.

As they have in the past on other issues, the board again split three to two on the meeting conduct policy.

Trustee Mrs. Dorothy Adams said that in view of the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution it would be impossible to enforce the policy. She added that she was "philosophically opposed" to it.

After being assured that it was the legal right of the board to set policy, Mrs. Adams pointed out that King George III of England "was in his legal rights" to do whatsoever he pleased, but he was often wrong in what he did.

Greenwood assured the board that Deputy District Attorney Lem Semmy had gone over the Parking Dominates D.C. Council Meet

The subject of parking dominated the Daly City city council study session last week.

Parking at the new Bay Area Rapid Transit station on Knowles Avenue, parking along Mission Street, and parking lot requests by the Mission Merchants Association were included in the discussions.

The BART multi-story parking garage, if built, will be a "first" for the 75 mile system.

After years of study, meetings and funding requests, officials feel the garage will be constructed.

Costing some $3.5 million, parking capacity will exceed 1200 cars. An agreement yet to be signed between Daly City and BART provides for no charge parking. Before this free parking can be changed to a day system both BART and Daly City must agree to it.

Daly City, through a bewildering channeling of government funds, will provide $285,000 toward the garage. The city's share will not, under the agreement, exceed $300,000. Of this total only $14,000 will be raised locally.

The remainder of monies for construction will come from various federal grants reserved for such purposes. BART, however, needs Daly City's share to qualify for the government money.

Mayor Bernard Lycett praised the cooperation of government officialdom and BART representatives taking part in the garage talks in recent weeks.

Vince Merlo, president of the Mission Merchants' Association again asked the city to take up the problem of parking along the business street.

"Again we are writing about our biggest problem on Mission Street and the Mission area, and that is parking," Merlo said in his plea for more parking spaces.

In response, the city council is expected to set up another study committee to meet with the merchants.

Mayor Lycett said he wants the issue settled "once and for all" and suggested some sort of matching funds program for purchase of parking lots be established with the merchants.

By sharing in the costs of land purchase the city feels merchants will take a greater interest in the issue.

Lycett pointed out that a public parking lot only a block off Mission Street—at the Top of the Hill section—is not being fully utilized.

The joint purchase suggestion made by Lycett appealed to Councilman McRobert Stewart, a member of the Mission Merchants' Association, who pointed up the fact "I don't want to give free rides anyplace."

First Degree Murder Verdict Against D.C. Artist's Slayer

Stanley O. Whitebread, 26, was convicted Thursday of first degree murder in the March 28 slaying of Daly City artist Wesley Strong, 64.

The defendant was convicted by a jury of six men and six women after a day and a half of deliberation. The trial began August 28 in the Redwood City Superior Court of Judge Louis B. Dematteis.

In the trial, Deputy District Attorney Robert Bishop contended that Whitebread and an unknown accomplice went to Strong's house at No. 2 Edgemar Road, broke in and ransacked the place. Then, holding Strong's mother, Florence, 91 as hostage, the pair waited for Strong to return home.

The victim had some $4400 in a savings account and the two men had apparently planned to force him to withdraw the money and give it to them.

Strong returned home after 3 p.m. and was confronted by the men. He turned and tried to get away and was shot in the back. Then Whitebread or his accomplice walked up as the victim

'Sign Hill' A Forested Oasis Soon?

South San Francisco's Sign Hill will become a forested oasis under plans approved Monday night by its reorganized Beautification Committee.

The plans, as drawn up by the parks department, call for eight mini-forests to be created on some thirty acres of sign hill. The city already owns 23.4 acres. Park officials hope that eight adjoining acres owned by private developers will be added to the development.

When completed, it will have hiking and biking paths and vista points. According to park and recreation official Peter Milkovich, the area now has plant varieties that can be found in few other places, such as the city's official flower, the iris, as well as wild violets and poppies. The forest are also expected to house a variety of wildlife.

Although standing in the shadow of San Bruno Mountain, Sign Hill — entirely surrounded by homes and public buildings — rises to 586 feet and provides a sweeping view of the entire south Bay area.

The hill now has at least one mini-forest, which was planted two years ago and is being closely cared for by a group of Boy Scouts who have recently weeded around the growing trees.

The committee backed an arrangement with the California Water Service Department for a special water connection to the water tank on Sign Hill, so that standard hoses can be attached to it. Once these connections have been made, the parks de-

'Normal' First Day At Local Schools

Opening day attendance at Daly City schools appeared to be normal for the first day, with long weekenders and late vacationers still to straggle in this week.

The Jefferson Elementary School District's first-day enrollment was 8,442, but another 800 to 1000 pupils can be expected by the end of the week, according to Supt. Frank Greenwood.

Enrollment on opening day at Jefferson Union High School District schools was down by nearly 300 from the projection of the number of students expected to be on campus by the end of the first week.

Dr. Robert Watt, assistant superintendent for business, said such a variation could be expected, because some students frequently do not return from family vacations until after the first week of school.

"We already know of an additional 20 at Oceana today," Dr. Watt said Tuesday after talking to Principal Joe Conway, former vice principal who was selected to replace Watt at the Pacifica campus last week.

Watt said the district had projected an enrollment of 7824 for the first week; instead, 7513 showed up.

By school, the enrollments Monday:

Jefferson, 1181; Westmoor, 1820; Oceana, 1306; Terra Nova, 1761; Serramonte, 1360; Thornton, 145.

Bargaining Continues in Bruno Hassle

It's now one down and one to go in the San Bruno city-employe union wage negotiation controversies.

The city's firefighters have agreed to a revised (from 3.2 per cent) increase of 3.7 percent in salaries for the first year of a two-year pact, authorizing pay retroactive to August 16. The last contract expired July 30, 1971.

Public works and library union employes, however, still have not reached agreement with the city. That body of employes, which has been granted strike sanction by the San Mateo Central Labor Council, apparently is attempting to meet again with City Manager Gerald Minford.

The city manager was instructed Monday night to prepare the necessary paperwork so the agreement between the firemen and city could be finalized at the September 25 council meeting.

As for the public works and library union employes, Minford said he has not been approached by their representative and, according to Minford, "It's their move."

In addition to the 3.7 per cent salary increase, the city's contribution toward insurance coverage for firemen will remain at the previously set $33.50 a month per employe.

The firefighters' union has agreed to cooperate with other city employe groups to review alternatives for a joint dental plan.

The city has agreed to pay 50 percent of any increase in insurance costs until June 30, 1974, at which time insurance costs will be subject to negotiation.

The city has agreed to implement a new procedure for payment of clothing allowance, which will provide payment not more frequently than twice a year.

Living radius for firemen will be changed to read from 3.2 smiles, to 3.2 miles or any location that will permit a fireman to respond to the central fire station within 15 minutes while obeying all laws under normal driving conditions.

There also were several revisions in the shift exchange policy of the firemen.

The second year of the pact says that effective July 1, 1973, salaries will be increased by an amount "equal, as close as possible, to the cost of living index" as reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics for the San Francisco Bay Area from March of 1972 to March of 1973.

And if on February of 1973, the average salary paid for any position, based on a five city average of (Millbrae, Burlingame, Pacifica, Daly City and South San Fracisco) is more than $15 above that paid San Bruno firefighters, the city agrees to adjust to the average effective July 1, 1973, prior to adding the cost of living adjustment.

Further, if after the five benchmark cities have granted 1973-74 increases that are $15 or more above what San Bruno offers, the city will adjust to that new average effective July 1, 1973.

was lying on the floor and shot him in the head.

The killers then leaped into Strong's car and roared away at a high rate of speed.

Whitebread turned himself in to Mexican police at Ensenada and confessed to the killing. He took officers to the car, which contained some of Strong's paintings and a bloody shirt with a hole in it.

The accomplice, known only as Paul, was never found.

Sentencing was scheduled by Judge Dematteis for September 21 at 4 p.m.

The victim was a retired navy chief petty officer and was the grandson of the Rev. Joseph Strong who immigrated to California in the 1850's and was prominent in California literary and religious affairs. Joseph Strong was said to be the publisher of the first magazine in California, "Hesperian."

these would be the most expensive item.

6. A Pedro Point site would cost $1,663,500 to build, it would provide 79 berths, would cost $153,000 a year to operate and would bring in $83,000 a year from its launching ramp, dry storage, berthing fees, fuel sales and concessions.

7. A Rockaway Beach site would cost $4,178,000 to build, would provide 350 berths 25 to 40 feet in length, would cost $318,000 to build and would bring in $281,200 a year in revenues.

Although the Rockaway Beach site would cost the city $38,000 per year, Lampman claimed that it would actually more than pay for itself.

"With the extraordinary revenue potential available by carefully developing the adjacent land, Pacifica could not only enjoy a substantial financial return, but become the marine center for San Mateo County," his report concluded. "The aesthetic and cultural benefits to be derived from this project are substantial."

The proposed location would include the flat area between the Coast Highway and the rock quarry formed by Calara Creek — currently used by the quarry for aggregate storage and pasture for nearby stables. Because of a conflict, current plans for the Highway 380 interchange on the coast would have to be drastically changed.

partment hopes it can keep the hill green, and thus fire-free.

The Beautification Committee members approved an offer by Les Davis, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, to act as volunteer coordinator between the city and volunteer groups. He said he would assign each forest to a group of Scouts or other youth group, to plant, water, weed, maintain — and receive credit. A competitive spirit would prevail among forests, he predicted.

The forest sites will be prepared in October and planted in November, just before rainy season.

Particularly enthusiastic for the project was new committee member Al Seubert, who, along with his former Boy Scout troop, has managed to establish the hill's one forest. Other new members are Joan Hamilton and Gloria Smith. They were named to replace staff members who formerly held voting positions, with the idea of widening citizen participation in beautification projects.

In other business, the Beautification Committee agreed to:

—Continue with the Lighting Award Program, to promote aesthetic outdoor lighting.

—Held over action on the widening and planting of Harbor Way, pedigree esolutio of new Southern Pacific signals, which are awaiting Public Utilities Commission approval.

—Approved plans to place benches with advertising in the area of Rotary Plaza, providing the advertising is low key, appropriate and aesthetic.

Special Meet In Millbrae

The City Council of the City of Millbrae will hold a special meeting on September 12, at 8 p.m. at city hall council chambers, 621 Magnolia Avenue in order to consider the recommendations for the development of the Millbrae spur as well as the recommendations of the planning commission and possibly to act upon it.

AIRMAN RONALD G. Bush, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bush of 5 Malavear Court, Pacifica, has been assigned to Whiteman AFB, Mo., after completing Air Force basic training. Airman Bush is a 1971 graduate of Terra Nova High School.

policy and found it to be acceptable.

"There is no muffle (attempt) here," Greenwood said, while noting the policy does set some limitations on conduct of the board's business.

The fact that the District Attorney's Office had given his nod to the policy came in response to a question by trustee Mrs. Beverly Forrester in which she asked if there were any "legal questions outstanding."

Greenwood replied: "I'm sure you'll think of some."

The policy is designed to bring order to the meetings.

It sets time limits, subjects for discussion, and who may speak ("residents of the district, students or the parents of students enrolled in the district and taxpayers may be allowed the privilege of the floor.")

What to Do About A Hydrant?

Millbrae Planning Commissioners were 3 for 1 last night, in sportsese.

That is, there were three items on their meeting agenda and they approved only one. The other two were held over, and one of those didn't even merit conversation.

What the Commissioners spent most time on, was an item not on the agenda: the problem of how to enforce a two-year-old agreement the city has with Daland Motors to install a fire hydrant.

The point to that problem is that Daland agreed to install curbs and gutters along Silva Avenue, where his used car lot borders the street, while winning a city permit for improvements to the dealership.

Now, the improvements have been made to the car lot, but not to the street. City officials have been wrestling with a revised agreement, which would call for Daland to install the curbs, gutters, sidewalks, and fire hydrant, when more than 50 per cent of curb and gutter work is done on the remainder of the block-long street.

But that subject did not come up until after planners had approved a four-lot subdivision for Paul Binsfield, and had verbally wrestled beautician Kenneth French to a draw on his application to remodel his "Road to Beauty" shop at 128 Park Place.

French agreed to a two-week delay, while he reconsiders plans, and while the city decides whether any improvements can be made to his commercial building in an apartment zone.

A Bank of America sign change application got no consideration at all, since the applicant had already asked for a delay.

Secondary Treatment In Pacifica

"The day came sooner than we expected," Pacifica Mayor Grace McCarthy jubilantly declared as the Council approved a motion to go to secondary treatment with the new sewer plant currently under construction in Sharp Park.

The Council voted to authorize an agreement with Consoer-Townsend and Associates to provide engineering services for the upgrading of the plant. This is the same firm which provided the current design, which is for primary treatment only.

The new upgrading will better insure the safety and cleanliness of Pacifica's beaches, according to Public Works Director Dwight French.

This move means that the remaining million dollars in bonds authorized in the recent $2½ million sewer bond authorization must now be sold.

"I predicted this," declared Emory Lebonville, local council critic.

Daly City Blood Drive September 21

The City of Daly City, in cooperation with the Peninsula Blood Bank is sponsoring a blood drive September 21 at the Civic Center.

A spokesman for the municipality said the campaign would be held in the police department's basement area, from 3 to 4 p.m.

The purpose of the drive is to obtain blood for the Peninsula Blood Bank and the account of Craig Eichner, 14-year-old son of city worker Tom Eichner, who has a rare blood disease.

A police officer's son recently required blood during open heart surgery, and is covering.

2 Charged In Motel Robbery

A young couple was arrested by Daly City police Sunday in connection with the armed hold-up of the Cavalier Motel, 1330 El Camino Real, South San Francisco, shortly after midnight on Sunday morning.

Arraigned in South San Francisco Municipal Court today were Manuel William Talavera, 21, 241 Village Way, South San Francisco, an unemployed operating engineer, and Gloria Mercedes Mariscal, 20, also of 241 Village Way. Both were being held in lieu of $5000 bail apiece.

According to South San Francisco police, a man entered the motel, at 12:45 a.m. Sunday, and asked for a room. While he was registering, a woman entered with a shotgun, and the man ordered the clerk to hand over all of his money. They took the loot, amounting to less than $100, and fled in a Volkswagen.

By noon, the same day, Daly City police found the car and occupants which fit the description given by the South City police, and took the duo into custody. They were observed in the vicinity of 344 Vista Grande.

Firemen Reach Pact

Except for the formalities of signing a memorandum of understanding, San Bruno firefighters have reached an agreement with the city in the 1972-73 negotiations.

San Bruno's public works and library employes, however, are playing the same old tune — no comment.

At a 5 p.m. meeting Wednesday in the city's corporation yard public works and library employes reviewed the city's ostensibly final offer but declined to comment on what the next move would be.

It was obvious they were not happy with the proposal. Several public works employes have made no secret about their bitterness in the fact that City Manager Gerald Minford with the city about eight months, was granted a better than six per cent wage increase, from $24,000 to $25,000 annually.

Jim Curran, president of the firefighters' union, said his group has "tentatively" approved of the revised proposal, which is now being drafted into final form.

Thompson to Pacifica

David J. Thompson, former city engineer for Pacifica, has been appointed new city manager of the seaside city, Mayor Grace L. McCarty announced last week.

Thompson was city engineer-director of public works in Pacifica from 1968 to 1971. Previous to that time he was assistant city engineer in San Mateo. He is currently director of public works in Manhattan Beach.

Thompson will assume his new position November 1. The city council agreed upon "final understandings" with him in a special meeting Saturday.

He will succeed Jim Swayne who had recently announced his resignation for a similar post in Ukiah.

Until Thompson arrives, City Engineer-Director of Public Works Dwight French will be serving as acting city manager, at the special request of the Council.

Thompson, who is 43, will receive a reported $25,500 a year. Swayne's annual salary was $21,624.

The Thompsons have a married son, David, living on Talbot Avenue in the Sharp Park district, who commutes to San Carlos to the Solid States Circuitry firm where he is employed, and has a one-year-old son, David IV. The Thompsons also have two daughters, Denise, 13, and Cynthia, 15. Mrs. Bea Thompson had been active in the Pacifica Federated Women's Club.

The new city manager had been active in numerous professional groups as well as the Environmental Protection Agency of San Mateo County.

He is a graduate of San Diego State College and has taken numerous postgraduate courses in engineering and in administration from the University of California and numerous other schools. He told this newspaper that he is enthusiastic about returning to Pacifica, where he will be able to see to fruition many of the projects which he had begun. These include the new sewer plant, now under construction, as well as the recently completed Sharp Park road widening and the Fassler Avenue improvement.

Mayor McCarthy said that the council had been meeting in personnel sessions constantly since Swayne had told them about his impending resignation. The council had not advertised to fill the position but felt that news of the vacancy had gotten around through word of mouth. A total of six to eight applicants had been interviewed, she said. The council, she added, had originally approached Thompson on his serving.

"He knows our problems," she said, "and won't have to take the time to learn about them from scratch. . . . He knows the persons he will have to deal with in other cities and in the county. . . . There is a long string of things which he had a part in starting which he knows about as well."

Crash Kills Millbrae Man and Wife

A Millbrae investment securities salesman and his wife were killed yesterday, and 11 people injured in a four-vehicle crash on Interstate 80 near Auburn, in the Sierra foothills.

The victims were Irwin Friedman, 59, a representative of the First California Company of San Mateo, and his wife, Thelma, residents of 207 Vallejo Drive, Millbrae.

Friedman had been employed by the local firm for 4½ years since coming to the Bay Area from Cleveland. He was well known in his field.

The Friedmans are survived by a son, Kenneth, in San Francisco, another son, Daniel, at Yale University, and other relatives.

Friedman was a cousin to the wife of Rabbi Gerald Raiskin of Peninsula Temple Sholom in Burlingame.

The local couple was en route to Lake Tahoe for "a very brief, two or three-day rest," according to friends.

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow at 11 a.m. at the Home of Peace cemetery in Colma, with Rabbi Raiskin officiating.

The injured bus passengers, returning to San Francisco after a night of gambling in Reno, were all treated for minor cuts and bruises and released from Placer County Hospital in Auburn shortly after the accident occurred.

Highway Patrol officers said Friedman's eastbound auto spun out of control after a minor collision with a large eastbound truck and trailer rig in a construction zone.

St. Dunstan's Bond Meeting Is Slated

A meeting of the committee to assure passage of the $1,143,000 bond proposal to buy Catholic Church property in Millbrae, will be held in the City Hall September 14 at 7 p.m.

Mayor Bernard Esser, calling the committee together, commented that the City Council has approved a special election to determine if the people of Millbrae want to buy the church land for open space.

The bond election will be combined with the November Presidential balloting, to save on costs.

Mayor Esser said a $1,120,000 price had been negotiated for the 22 acres of property owned by the Archdiocese of San Francisco, west of St. Dunstan's Church and school.

He described the property as "the sole remaining large piece of beautifully situated open space in the city."

"The Council's intent, bolstered by an intense public interest when plans were announced last fall for sale of the property, "is to acquire the land now and preserve it as open space so it will always be available to future generations.

"If the bond measure is not successful, then, more than likely, the land will be developed in the very near future by private interests."

Private investors have already submitted plans for development of the area as an apartment site, which were rejected by the city, or as sites for single-family homes.

Mayor Esser said the bond issue would be for $1,143,000. This covers the $1,120,000 cost of the land, plus two per cent for fees of financial and legal consultants.

He said it is estimated that the annual cost per household, would be $13.

Dog Nearly Dies From Scratching Skin Raw

"Last year, a skin problem made our dog Heidi scratch her skin raw. I thought we'd have to put her to sleep, she suffered so. Then a neighbor told me about Sulfodene. I put Sulfodene all over Heidi. She stopped scratching and soon she was completely healed. Her coat grew back nice and thick. I'm convinced Sulfodene saved her life."
Mrs. L. Schrank, Arlington Hts., Ill.

Woman Found Slain in Van

The beaten, nude body of a young former Millbrae woman was found covered by an Indian blanket Tuesday in a truck parked in an insurance building's basement garage on MacArthur Boulevard in Oakland.

The Alameda County coroner's office identified the victim as Joan Gery, 24, daughter of Mrs. Irene Gery, 327 Helen Drive, Millbrae. The coroner said her hands had been bound behind her body with a cloth belt.

Both the face and the head were badly bruised.

William Pascal, a claims adjuster who first noticed the unauthorized small van, found the body lying on the truck floor.

The vehicle was a 1961 model.

Cause of death, the coroner's office said, was "shock and hemorage due to a blunt trauma."

150 Classes for Adults Set In Jefferson High District

Director of Adult Education Louis J. Martin has announced that 150 classes for adults in the Jefferson Union High School District in Daly City and Pacifica will start registration for the Fall Quarter on September 18.

During the first week, adults must register in class with their instructors.

Five high school campuses will be open to accommodate the adult student body: Jefferson and Westmoor, Monday through Thursday evening; Serramonte, Thursday evening only; in the city of Pacifica Terra Nova, Monday and Wednesday evenings, and Tuesday evenings at Oceana.

There are several community locations in Daly City offering primarily sewing classes during the day. They are located in Daly City Recreation Department at 134 Hillside Blvd. and in the Bayshore Housing Development at 111 Iwo Jima Rd. in the Bayshore region.

An ever-increasing variety of classes is being offered for self-improvement and enrichment in Academics, Business, Education, Fine Arts and Crafts, Foreign Languages, Health Education, Homemaking, Industrial Arts, Music, Driver Training, English as a second language, and Preparation for Citizenship.

For adults over 18 years of age seeking a high school diploma a full line of academic and elective courses is available.

In addition, for new enrollees in the diploma program a full-time adult counseling and advisory service is available to all adult students to evaluate present academic standing and to assist in preparing a program of courses leading to a high school diploma G.E.D. and Vocational testing is available through the counseling services.

During the past year, more than 50 adults earned a high school diploma with over 2000 students enrolled in the program this year. With the expansion of the adult counseling services and the continuing need for high school diplomas, an even larger number of adults will receive diplomas in the academic year 1972-73.

E.S.L. classes or English as a second language are available to any adult of foreign extraction who desires to learn or improve his use of the English language. The present program offers services to more than 150 adult students. These courses are designed to develop in the non-English speaking student an ability to speak, read, and write in his new language and to become familiar with the culture of his present community.

Business Education courses include Bookkeeping and Accounting; Civil Service Preparation, Financial Planning for Individuals and Small Businessmen, Typing at all levels and Shorthand. In the Homemaking section courses are available in all aspects of clothing, dressmaking, knitting, patternmaking, and tailoring. Within this section interesting courses in home cooking and Food Preparation, Gardening, and Home Maintenance are available.

The Fine Arts section offers enrichment in Oil Painting at all levels, Figure Drawing with live models, Acrylics Workshop, Oriental Brush Painting, and Portraiture. In addition, Ceramics, Pottery and Sculpture is offered at several locations. Those students who like to work with tools to improve mechanical skills may enroll in Upholstery, Auto Mechanics and Wood Skills classes.

On the Jefferson campus two new courses are being offered with emphasis on occupational training. They are: Retail Cashiering and Merchandising and for cooks' helpers, caterers and others Restaurant and Commercial Food Management.

These and many more courses of general interest are being offered by the Jefferson Union High School District's Adult Division starting the fall quarter on September 18.

New brochures are currently available at all adult high school campus locations. Persons who were enrolled during the Spring Quarter will receive a brochure in the mail.

Additional brochures are in the city libraries and municipal offices.

Registration for the Fall Quarter will start September 18, and space in class will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis. Register during this first week to avoid disappointment in your favorite class.

Debating Olympic Pool

D.C. Council Shocked Over Munich News

News that all eight Israeli hostages held by Arab terrorists at Olympic Village in Munich had been murdered fell like a pall over the Sept. 5 joint meeting of the Daly City city council and Jefferson Union High School District.

It was midway through a discussion on construction of a new Olympic-sized swimming pool at Westmoor High School when the tragic story swept the room.

Comments were brief.

All condemned the action. The question "why?" was repeated over and over. No one seemed to have the answer.

Discussions and much head-shaking followed in the lobby of city hall following adjournment of the session minutes later.

At the outset of the meeting on the proposed pool the Munich situation centered around the good news that somehow all eight hostages had escaped unscathed during a gun battle.

When news of the deaths passed around the civic center it was taken grimly.

Most felt that the Olympic Games should go on.

"It makes little sense to let a handful of terrorists close down the Olympics," commented Mayor Bernard Lycett. "I'm a firm believer in the show goes on. Stopping the games would prove nothing."

Others agreed.

Each qualified their opinions by insisting proper memorial services for the slain Israelis be held.

The pool is proposed as a joint venture with the city and JUHSD splitting costs on a 60-40 per cent ratio—the school picking up the lion's share.

Officials on both sides had shelved the pool matter some months ago following receipt of a low construction bid that was double what the architectural pool firm of Zavin Tatarian & Associates had proposed.

Following months of preparation by Tatarian the low bid offered exceeded $1.2 million.

Working with plans and specifications drawn up by the previous architectural firm, Russ Levikow, of Yuill-Thornton, Warner & Levikow Architects, offered to construct the pool for a price of some $697,000.

Several clauses were included in the contract proposal designed to protect both the city and high school district.

The city has already payed out some $48,000 in architectural fees to Tatarian.

Levikow's firm, which designed the South San Francisco pool at Orange Park, put an architectural and engineering ceiling of $39,000 on their proposal.

And if construction costs exceed estimates of $642,000 by more than ten per cent, Levikow stands ready to revise the plans at no cost, he told the district and city Tuesday.

Once the firm is given the green light by both agencies, the pool could be built within ten months, barring strikes or bad weather.

"We are used to working under these restraints," Levikow said in outlining his proposal.

Noting that the Orange Park pool had come in for some local criticism because of "hairline" cracks in the concrete flooring, Levikow said publicity on the matter "got out of proportion."

He said the pool was under a one-year bond and the matter has been settled.

"Hairline cracks" often result from concrete shrinkage and is normal, the boards were told.

Councilman Tony Giamonna, physical education director at Westmoor, said two other companies had replied to inquiries concerning construction

I got rid of unwanted hair in minutes and it stayed off for weeks.

By Alexandra DuVal of Santa Barbara, California

The other day, I was reading a beauty column in a teen magazine and a girl wrote and asked how she could get rid of a heavy growth of hair on her legs.

I felt like answering her, but I didn't have her address. I wanted to tell her about a natural organic hair remover I've found that's just super. Really fantastic. It's called Delila and it keeps hair off my legs much longer than shaving does for my friends. In fact, with Delila, you don't ever have to shave. Or use messy, smelly creams or foams. I know.

You see, I'm fourteen and being an outdoor girl, I just live in short shorts and bikinis and tennis clothes. So I have to look smooth—at least on my legs. And that's how Delila keeps me. Smooth. No nicks or scrapes or cuts.

You have to follow directions, of course. But they're easy. You put Delila right on your leg. Smooth a special zip cloth over it. Pull—and hair's off. When I feel how smooth my legs are . . . wow! That Delila really lifts the hair right out. Stays off for weeks, too. And when the hair starts to grow back, it's soft as anything.

Some of the girls I know even use Delila on their arms and upper lips. They think it's great, too.

One thing we've all learned is the longer you use Delila, the less often you have to. Hair just seems to come back sparser and baby soft each time.

You really ought to try it. Honest. Specially if you live in the sun like me.

NOTE: Delila™ Natural Organic Hair Remover. $5.95. Available at

A handful of ribbons were won by the Varsity Cheerleaders, Alex Senica, Renee Jefferson, Diane Harrison, Janice Williams and Patti Spinetti; they also took Superior Trophies for Excellence and Outstanding Performance.

Good morning, good cooks.

If I asked a very young friend of mine what a wok is, he would probably reply, "A wok is what you throw in the wiver to make wipples." And in his way he is wight.

However the wok I have in mind is a cooking utensil primarily used in Oriental cooking. Recently I received a recipe calling for the use of a wok, having none, I substituted my electric skillet and it worked fine.

"Serendipity Beef" combines soy sauce and sherry marinaded beef with string beans, then served over rice. The recipe indicated it would serve two, I found it served four, so you will have to gauge the appetities of your diners when preparing it.

SEREDIPITY BEEF

1 pound top round beef, thinly sliced (¼-inch)
5 Table spoons soy sauce
1 Tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon sugar
2 Tablespoons sheery
1 package (10 oz.) frozen string beans, julienne cut
4 Tablespoons cooking oil

At least one hour ahead, prepare the marinade of five tablespoons soy sauce, one tablespoon cornstarch, one teaspoon sugar and two tablespoons sherry. Slice the one pound beef in ¼-inch strips and marinate at room temperature for one hour. (Note: freeze beef slightly for most efficient thin slicing for all Oriental recipes.)

In saucepan, cook frozen beans as directed on package, less one minute, taking care not to overcook. Drain.

While beans cook, heat oil in wok. When hot, add beef and cook for a few seconds, turning frequently with a fork. Add beans to beef and stir-fry beef until beef is cooked (about three minutes). Serve over hot buttered rice. Serves two . . . or more.

SINCE WE are thinking along these lines, these Chinese Almond Cookies are quite easy to make and would go nicely with tea for dessert.

This recipe makes a large amount, about eight dozen so unless you plan to share your baking bounty with someone, you might want to cut the recipe in half.

CHINESE ALMOND COOKIES

2 cups lard (that's one pound)
2 cups sugar
2 eggs
2 teaspoons almond extract
6 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
2 teaspoons salt
Whole blanched almonds

Cream the two cups lard (don't substitute shortening) with the two cups sugar until light. Add and beat in the two eggs and two teaspoons almond extract.

Sift together the six cups flour, two teaspoons each baking soda and salt. Add to creamed mixture and mix well.

Roll dough into balls about size of a small walnut, place on ungreased cookie sheet, press ceter with your thumb and place an almond in indentation. Bake in 375-degree oven for 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Makes 8 dozen.

These cookies are Chinese in name only, but they are mighty good and well worth your time and effort.

CHINESE CHEWS

½ cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon each cinnamon and nutmeg
½ teaspoon baking powder
Two-thirds cup sugar
2 eggs
1 cup sliced dates
2 Tablespoons melted butter
1 cup chopped nuts

Sift together the one-half cup flour, fourth teaspoon each salt, cinnamon and nutmeg and one-half teaspoon baking powder. Beat the two eggs lightly and gradually add the two-thirds cup sugar, beat well. Add the two tablespoons melted butter and one cup each dates and nuts. Lastly fold in the sifted ingredients. Mix thoroughly.

Pour into greased 8-inch square pan and bake in 350-degree oven about 30 minutes.

CORRECTION: In the Igloo Meat Loaf published last week the amount of pepper needed is one-eighth teaspoon. The Cinnamon Apple Crisp calls for one-fourth (¼) cup butter.

"SWING YOUR PARTNER" was the familiar call at Serramonte Shopping Center last weekend, as hundreds of square dancers gathered to celebrate Square Dance Week in Daly City. Pictured are members of the Pairs and Squares Club of San Bruno. Also participating were the Kalico Kats of Daly City, Western Twirlers of Colma, Forty-Niners and Whirl-A-Ways of South San Francisco, Gingham Squares of Millbrae and Pacifica Squares of Pacifica, in addition to seven San Francisco clubs. Vows are Exchanged

Olson-Carey

Lake Tahoe was the honeymoon destination of Mr. and Mrs. Steven Lee Carey (Janis Christine Olson) who were married at St. Dunstan's Church and are now living in Redwood City.

Parents of the newlyweds are Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Olson and Mr. and Mrs. Augustus O. Carey. Both families live in Millbrae.

Janis said her promises in a white satin floor length gown with a detachable train and applique trim. Her attendants all wore sleeveless floor length lavender Empire gowns.

Joan Madelein Olson was the honor attendant for her sister. Secondary attendants were Karen Nielsen of Fremont and Lori and Lynn Olson of San Bruno, Janis' cousins.

Steven asked Kenneth Orion Carey of Milpitas, his brother, to be the best man. David Olson, the bride's brother, and Kim Coutts of San Jose, seated guests who later felicitated the couple in the Mermaid Room of the El Rancho Restaurant.

The newlyweds are both graduates of Capuchino High School. She continued her education at California State University at Chico and he finished his schooling at the College of San Mateo and California State University at San Jose where he is now in his senior year.

The bride is presently employed by the County of San Mateo at Crystal Springs Rehabilitation Center.

The bridegroom has one sister, Susan Lydora Heinz. After earning his bachelors degree, he will be commissioned a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army.

McCrellis-Himm

Denise Marie McCrellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. McCrellis of South San Francisco, recently became the bride of Nimrod Himm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Himm of Daly City.

The couple was married at Mater Dolorosa Church in South San Francisco and received felicitations at the Elks Lodge in that city. They honeymooned in Disneyland and are now living in South San Francisco.

Debbie Bovero of Half Moon Bay served as the maid of honor and secondary attendants were Ann Kokezas and Sue Manely. Carolyn Himm was the flower girl and Art Himm carried the rings.

Jim Sartin stood with the bridegroom as best man and Bob Himm, his brother, and William Hill seated guests who included the bride's sister, Laura Mitchell of Phoenix.

Tree and Ecology Classes at WHS

An evening adult course, "An Introduction to Geology," will begin September 19 at Westmoor High School in Daly City.

The class will meet on Tuesdays from 7 to 10 p.m.

The purpose of the course is to teach the methods of field recognition and interpretation of geologic processes, to present a workable knowledge of the geologic forces modifying the landscape, and to create an awareness of the geologic landscape.

The instructor will be Neil Fahy, who received his degree in the geological sciences from the University of California at Berkeley. He is a former earth science instructor at the Josephine D. Randall Junior Museum, and is author of "Simplified Mineral Identification" and "Geology and History of San Bruno Mountain, San Mateo.

The course is offered to the general public. There are no residence requirements. Registration will be at the first class meeting.

Beginning September 21 an adult class titled "Trees and Shrubs of the Bay Area" will be presented at Westmoor on Thursdays from 7 to 10 p.m.

Daly City residence is not required.

The objective of the class is to recognize the common trees and shrubs of the Bay Area, become acquainted with the procedure for identifying an unknown plant, aware of the ecology of the plant communities and to acquire an appreciation and develop a concern for our natural resources.

Each meeting will consist of a discussion, slides and plant identification.

Field trips will be taken to see redwood forest, coastal scrub, and woodland plant communities.

DC Jr. Teens Help in Benefit

The Castaways Junior Teen Club, sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Department, recently took part in the fight against muscular dystrophy as they participated in the Jerry Lewis Telethon.

The teens helped raise money for this most worthy cause and were publicly thanked on national television for "caring." Daly City and the Recreation Department is proud of the Castaways Teens for their efforts.

Postmaster in D.C. Counters Rate Claims by Magazines

Statements by magazine publishers that postage rates for magazines have been greatly increased are exaggerated and misleading, Daly City Postmaster Vincent P. Murphy said this week.

"An average popular magazine now costs only 3.2 cents in postage fees per copy to mail. And these are the new increased rates," he stated.

Postage rates in effect for popular magazines in early 1971 amounted to only about 2½ cents per average magazine. This was increased in May 1971 to 3 cents each on a temporary basis. The new average postage charge of 3.2 cents went into effect on July 6, 1972.

"These postage charges for mailing magazines are extrmely reasonable. Compare thm, for instance, to postage costs for a first class letter weighing one ounce or less which comes to 8 cents, or the postage for an eight ounce advertising circular which comes to 13 cents," Postmaster Murphy noted.

Under the rate schedules which took effect in early July, postage charges for magazines will increase by a fraction of a penny each year for the next five years. Even by July, 1976, however, the scheduled charge will still be only 5.8 cents per average magazine. This is still well under the cost of mailing a first class letter.

Murphy said "Reports about increases of 127 pecent and up have promoted an impression that the changes amount to much more than is really involved in the July 6 changes.

"Currently, the average mailer pays nearly the same postage as he has in the past year, and the increases for some volume mailers generally will be only a fraction of a cent per piece," he added.

First class and airmail rates remain at 8 cents and 11 cents an ounce, he pointed out. First class and airmail cards are still 6 cents and 9 cents each. And "priority" mail (air parcel post) rates remain exactly the same as before, he noted.

Also unchanged are rates for regular parcel post and "special" and "library rate" fourth class mail.

The reports which refer to increases of more than 127 percent, he explained, refer to the total increase phased in over five years for "regular" rate second class mail, such as popular magazines.

"The Postal Service is concerned, of course, even about the second class rate increases, because we want to keep rates as low as possible. However, newspapers and magazines have been heavily subsidized in the past, and the Postal Service is required to gradually eliminate this subsidy under postal reorganization law. Even so, the publications are being given until the fifth year to adjust," he said, "and the taxpayers will continue to subsidize the publications until then."

For non-profit mailers, he pointed out, the new rates are even less, and are designed only to cover the actual "attributable" costs, or out-of-pocket costs to the Service for this mail; most other classes of mail will cover their attributable costs as well as made a contribution to general postal overhead costs.

High Holy Days at Congregation B'nai Israel

Regular Sabbath Services will be conducted during the High Holy Days at Congregation B'nai Israel September 15 at 8:30 p.m. and September 16 at 10 a.m.

"Joy in Deliverance" is the theme selected by Rabbi Sheldon Edwards.

"REturn, Return to Israel" has been chosen as Rabbi Edwards' sermon topic for Friday night and "My Door is Never Closed" will be delivered on Saturday morning. Also officiating at the services will be Cantor Henry Greenberg who will chant the liturgy.

The High Holy Days will conclude with the Yom Kippur Services to be held at the Temple. The Kol Nidre Service will be conducted on September 17 at 7:30 p.m. Rabbi Edwards and Cantor Greenberg will officiate. Cantor Greenberg will chant the "Kol Nidre," a haunting, plaintive melody at least 600 years old in its present form that represents an absolution for any broken vows between man and God. Those that occur between man and man are not forgiven by the recitation of the Kol Nidre prayer but by direct resolution between the parties involved.

Rabbi Edwards has selected "The Buried Treasure" as his sermon topic and A. Arthur Hirschhorn, president of the Congregation, will deliver the traditional Yom Kippur address.

Earlier, at 10 a.m., a memorial service will be held at the Eternal Home Chapel at the Colma cemetery, which is traditional during the Ten Days of Awe, as the High Holy Days are also described.

The schedule of services for the Yom Kippur day, a day of fasting and repentance, September 18 will begin at 8:30 a.m. and continue with the Torah service at 10:15; Yiskor memorial service at 11:15; Musaf service at 12:15; Mincha service at 4:45; Ne'ilah service at 6; Ma'ariv and Havdallah services at 7:15.

At the conclusion of this part of the day, the Shofar (Ram's Horn) is blown and Yom Kippur has ended. Rabbi Edwards will deliver sermons during the day entitled "The Age of Schlemiels" and "How High Is Up?"

The members of the student body, headed by Marian Fisher, will host the traditional "Break the Fast" buffet.

Two special services will be held for the younger generation of the congregation. Children's services will be held at 3:30 p.m. for those children age 12 and under.

The sermon topic will be "God Loves You." A Young People's Service will be held at 4 p.m. and "Is This All a Myth?" is the sermon topic.

Both services will be conducted by Rabbi Sheldon Edwards and Cantor Henry Greenberg.

Coordinator Of Program Is Selected

Gerhard Lowenthal, principal of the Beth Israel-Judea Religious School, anncunced the appointment of Dina Steinberg as the new Teacher Assistant Program coordinator.

The Teacher Assistant Program is offered to all post confirmands of Congregation Beth Israel-Judea.

At the present time, there are 30 young persons from the ages of 16 through 18, assisting every Sunday throughout the school in classrooms, office, audio-visual department, dance, art and music.

In addition, these teacher assistants now will meet monthly with Mrs. Steinberg for an ongoing training program. A two-day seminar is being planned for late October where the teacher assistants will receive an in-depth program in the areas of methodology, material presentations, pupil-teacher relations.

Special groups of the teacher assistants will be formed into story-telling units to tour the various grade levels and to prepare and produce monthly faculty newsletters.

Mrs. Steinberg, as Teacher Assistant Program coordinator, will direct all of these activities and continue to serve as the confirmation instructor of the tenth grade in Religious School.

Devotions Set Every Friday Night at OLPH

Devotions to Our Lady of Perpetual Help will be held every Friday evening at 7 starting September 15 at Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church, 60 Wellington Ave., Daly City.

The title "of Perpetual Help" derives from one of the most famous of all pictures of Mary, an icon of the fourteenth century, painted on walnut wood. It was venerated, famous for miracles in the Roman church of St. Matthew's for a century till the church was destroyed in war in 1798.

The picture was saved and in 1866 it was set up in the Redemptorist church of St. Alphonsus on the site of St. Matthew's. In the following year it was crowned and since then numberless copies and reproductions of the icon have gone all over the world, some of them themselves wonderworking.

The picture of Our Lady of Perpetual Help in Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church is a very old one and its very interesting background will be discussed by Pastor Rev. John Mullen at the first devotions on September 15.

The public is invited to participate in the devotions.

Following the devotions, Our Lady of Perpetual Help Filipino Organization of Northern San Mateo County will hold a meeting in the hall behind the church. Refreshments will be served. Filipinos and friends are invited.

New Pacifica Housing Voted

It looks as if Pacifica may soon house a new 64-unit apartment complex.

Planning commissioners on September 5 gave their 3-2 approval to the complex, to be built by MacDonald, Nelson & Heck on Palmetto Avenue, overlocking the Sharp Park Beach from the top of cliffs towering 130 to 140 feet high.

Planners gave their approval to the development plan for the Planned - Development - zoned site, with Humberto E. Bermudez and Richard I. Meier voting "No." Bermudez objected to the parking plan.

The complex will include an enclosed recreational area. It will have 48 one-bedroom and 16 two-bedroom units, with an estimated population of 147 persons, including 19 children of school age.

The site, in the past, has been a controversial one. Some three years ago it was approved for a 100-unit project called "Sea Gardens," with the city stopping the grading last year. In approving the new plan, city officials specified that the buildings be set back at least 170 feet from the cliff's edge. A new owner bought the site on May 8.

There was no commission split as a rezoning request for the corner of Linda Mar Boulevard and DeSolo Drive was rejected, 5-0. Eureka Federal Savings and Loan asked to rezone the two lots (neighborhood commercial) so that it could build a branch office.

The staff recommended turning down the request because it would constitute an intrusion of commercial use into a residential district. A group of neighbors appeared at the meeting to protest the rezoning.

Three use permit requests by Shell Oil Company were held over to the September 18 meeting.

The requests, filed by D. L. Hodges, were to:

1. Build an "in-bay" car wash facility within the existing station on Crespi Drive.

2. Relocate a pump island and remodel station on Rockaway Beach Avenue and Coast Highway.

3. Develop site further on the Crespi Drive station.

Commissioners wanted the firm to pay for relocation of the pump island to accommodate the Fassler Avenue widening, but were uncertain as to legal aspects.

Education Of Parents

An ambitious program of parent education is being planned by the Millbrae School District for this fall.

Sponsored by the Millbrae Council of P-TA's, it encompasses speakers on such subjects as psychology, the mentally gifted child, learning opportunity groups, as well as discussions of the average child.

All nine of the district's schools will have speakers present at the evening session, scheduled for November 15, with each school having someone work with Mrs. Gerald Poppers, chairman of the program.

Her assistants include the Diane Gallagher, Green Hills School; Marty Lohman, Glen Oaks; Debbie Wheeler, Lomita Park; Marge Seidel and Tiny Sand, Millbrae; Sally Malouf, Meadows; Shirley Razzini, Spring Valley; Leona McQuinn, Chadbourne; Jo Marie Moresco, Highlands; Carol Frankel, Rosemary Comarto and Mrs. Poppers, from Taylor.

Long Urges 'Independence' For the Broadmoor Area

Assemblyman Candidate in San Bruno, Attorney Ted Long, has urged recognition of the unincorporated community of Broadmoor as an independent entity.

Long, who recently toured several San Mateo County Law Enforcement Departments, stated:

"One of the best tools in the fight of crime is community spirit and community participation. I saw this spirit at its highest in Broadmoor and the Foster City areas.

"Daly City's continued efforts to annex this small community should be stopped," Long said. "Many of the area's services already have been absorbed but the area seems to be functioning on a rather efficient basis," he added.

"I strongly support Broadmoor's effort to remain free from the threat of annexation and encourage other communities to develop the kind of spirit and community action program that I have seen in Broadmoor, particularly typified by the recent Fourth of July celebration which indicates the kind of 'community spirit' that leads to citizen involvement," Long stated.

Figures Justify Need for North County Jail

By FRANK LaPIERRE

Faced with a projected 200-plus per cent rise in adult felony crimes over the next four years in some North County cities, the need for a correctional facility in that area cannot be overstressed, members of the North County Council of Cities were told Thursday.

Both South San Francisco police chief Sal Rosano and Pacifica councilman Harland Minshew pointed up the fact that a special report on such a facility made by jail expert Raymond W. Meier in June, justified the need for a full-fledged jail in the North County.

Initially the NCCC had discussed a temporary facility merely to "hold" persons awaiting trial for arraignment after arrest by police.

Such a jail would save time and money by cutting the distance prisoners had to be transported to Redwood City and back to the North County Court the next day, supporters of the proposal felt.

A committee was formed and Meier was obtained to make the report.

The corrections consultant found that long range needs of the county, based on the projected dramatic increase in the crime rate in Daly City (212 per cent); Pacifica (214 per cent); South San Francisco (133 per cent); Broadmoor-Colma (130 per cent); Brisbane (122 per cent) and San Bruno (34 per cent) dictated a full scale correctional facility be built, adjacent to the North County Courthouse in South San Francisco

"After considering all aspects of the problem, the duplications, the long range needs and the following justifications, it is recommended that a North County correctional facility be established as soon as possible on county owned land adjacent to the Northern Judicial Court House.

"Such a facility should not be limited to detention and confinement but should be planned to provide maximum treatment to those incarcerated even for short periods of time," Meier reported.

Chief Rosano and Minshew got the unanimous backing of the NCCC membership on their request to again push the matter before the County Board of Supervisors. Earlier attempts for funds to study the issue had been shelved and forgotten by the supervisors, some members charged.

One of the hardest-hitting justifications for the North County facility — which received full support from police chiefs throughout the North County — was the cost of transporting a prisoner from the north to Redwood City.

Meier said approximate average cost was $10.50 for the officer's time devoted to this job, plus 52 miles at 15 cents per mile ($7.80).

"The exact number of trips to the county jail per year by each police department could not be determined. The cities adequate jail quarters (there are only three) took some of their prisoners direct to the Northern District Court . . . and some to the county jail," Meier's report explained.

Meier noted that most chiefs of police would like to get out of the jail business so they might devote full time to law enforcement.

There are many advantages to having a second county jail, including the increasing trend to decentralize jail operations away from massive institutions and locate in smaller facilities where better control of inmates can be exercised and rehabilitative programs better supervised, it has been stressed.

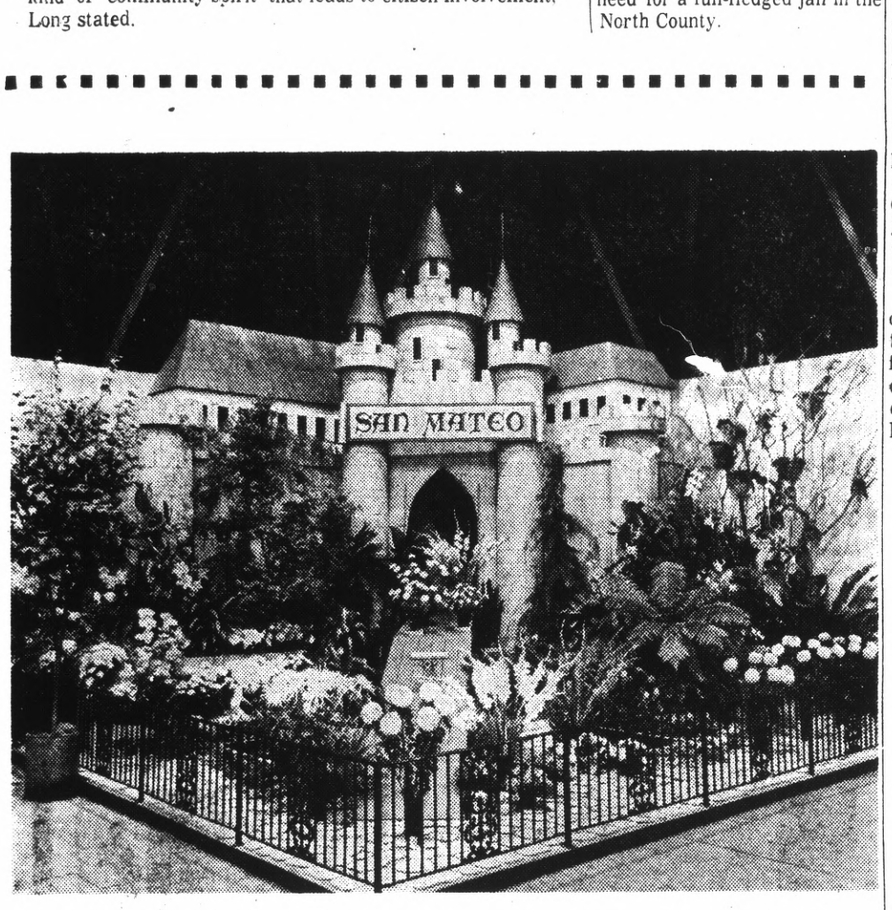
"With the present county jail at full capacity now, at least on weekends, the next year or two is certain to result in a need for more space," Meier said.

Addition of a north county facility would be consistent with the findings of experts on a number of national commissions and survey groups, it was explained in the report.

There is also a movement among corrections experts to do away with facilities housing 400 to 500 prisoners in favor of two 200 man facilities, according to law enforcement authorities.

Rather than expand the Redwood City jail though should be given to building another facility in the north end of the county.

Time is a factor, Meier said. "The need is urgent for the cities having no facilities or indequate accommodations with construction costs, labor and materials steadily rising."



THIS SAN MATEO exhibit at the California State Fair garnered first place honors in the counties exhibit competition floriculture category, featuring flowers and ornamental plants and their uses. The display was viewed by thousands of fairgoers during the 20-day Cal Expo event which runs through September 13.

Good Intentions Turn Sour, 2 Held

Good intentions soured last night and the change of mind eventually resulted in a citizens' arrest of two persons in San Bruno.

Booked shortly after midnight were Barry S. MacLean, 29, of 133 Santa Dominga Avenue, San Bruno, and Eleanor L. Walker, 37, of 427 Richmond Drive, Millbrae.

Police charged MacLean with carrying a concealed weapon, a loaded firearm and assault and battery. He was released on $1,285 bail.

The woman was booked for disturbing the peace and obstructing an officer in the process of making an arrest. She posted $440 in bail.

Both are scheduled to appear in South San Francisco's Northern Judicial Court at 9 a.m. September 25, police said.

According to police reports, MacLean, a warehouseman, and his companion, who listed her occupation as bartender, had come out of Rio Bar on San Mateo Avenue when an unidentified juvenile reportedly made some uncomplimentary remarks.

Police said MacLean walked across the street to discuss the matter. Meanwhile, James G. O'Donnell, manager of the nearby El Camino Theater, who had witnessed the incident, went across the street, initially to assist MacLean.

However, according to O'Donnell's report to police, MacLean said he could handle the situation and pulled a pistol from a jacket pocket to emphasize the fact.

O'Donnell told police he at that time informed MacLean the gun wouldn't be necessary, at which time, according to O'Donnell, MacLean turned on him.

MacLean subsequently took off his jacket, placed it in his car and swung on O'Donnell, who retaliated "in self-defense" and put a gash above MacLean's left eye, police learned.

About this time Officer Larry Clifford, on routine patrol, noticed the scuffling. He stopped and in attempting to get the story was hassled by the Walker woman.

According to police, MacLean gave Clifford permission to look in MacLean's car at which time Clifford found a .25-caliber automatic pistol with a loaded clip in MacLean's jacket picket.

Brisbane Airport Approved

Creation of a special airport for short - take - off - and - landing aircraft at Brisbane was approved Friday by the Federal Aviation Administration.

In a ruling by Don M. Davis chief of the airspace and procedures branch of the FAA's air traffic division, it was "determined that the establishment of this airport is acceptable."

Restrictions on the airport, so far as the FAA is concerned, would include private use of the field, use of the field during daylight only, and coordination of flight operations with the San Francisco airport air traffic control.

Approval of the airport was applied for months ago by Helio Aircraft, of Oakland International Airport.

The FAA approval does not grant final permission to construct the airport, and does not overrule any local ordinance.

Before construction can proceed, the project would also have to be approved by San Mateo County jurisdiction.

As proposed by Helio Aircraft, the airport would include two runways, one 1000 feet long and another 1500 feet long, west of the James Lick Freeway (Candlestick causeway) and 1300 feet south of the Southern Pacific railroad's marshalling yard.

Helio Aircraft officials were not available for comment today, but earlier said they planned to base five aircraft there within the next five years.

Cities Asked To Preserve Corridor

County Manager M. D. Tarshes has been requested by the Board of Supervisors to ask cities along the rapid transit corridor from Daly City to San Francisco International Airport to take action to assure protection of the route.

Supervisor James V. Fitzgerald asked that Tarshes request the cities to protect the corridor plan lines by including them as part of the individual city master plans.

County Engineer S. H. Cantwell, project director of the San Mateo County Transit Development Project, said that he will ask the County Planning Commission to take similar action.

Driveway Owner Must Pay Rent

Burlingame apartment owner Douglas Pringle will be asked to pay rent to the city of Millbrae, for a driveway to his building.

Pringle's Skyline Terrace apartments are in Burlingame, but Millbrae City Engineer Val Padovan has advised his city council that Pringle's driveway is in Millbrae.

Not only does it enter a Millbrae street, Vallejo Drive, the driveway crosses Millbrae-owned property to do so, Padovan said.

He said his office had been in contact with Pringle over this small matter since the Skyline Terrace apartments were built in 1968. Padovan asked for council authorization to take further legal steps.

Councilmen directed him to seek an agreement from Pringle, for a rental price, for use of Millbrae's property for the past four years. Padovan said he would contact Pringle immediately.

The council also directed City Administrator Richard Watson to contact California's two senators, to see if they can make the National Flood Insurance program more effective.

Several Millbrae residents purchased the federally-sponsored flood insurance last year, after being assured it would apply to the damage their homes had suffered in landslides. Later, however, the insurance companies carrying the policies, denied any responsibility, and the homeowners have found no one to turn to for help.

Councilmen agreed to a joint powers agreement with Burlingame, to plan and build a deep-water sewage outfall line.

They observed a moment of silence in honor of the Israeli Olympic athletes who had been killed that day in Munich, and adjourned the meeting in their memory.

Hearing Set Sept. 27

Court Halts Bypass Project on Coast

A federal judge in San Francisco has halted construction, opposed by conservationist groups, of the proposed 6.9-mile, $16 million Devil's Slide Bypass project on California 1.

In his Tuesday order staying further work on the project between Pacifica and Half Moon Bay, U.S. District Court Judge William Sweigert also set a court hearing Sept. 27 to determine whether to grant a preliminary injunction against the project.

The Sierra Club and other conservation groups have sought to block the proposed four-lane roadway, which would reroute California 1 about a mile east of its present site.

Judge Sweigert also stayed notices to vacate properties, which were to have been effective Sept. 15, along the route.

Judge Sweigert said that the state of California may advertise for bids on the project, but may not open the bids nor proceed in any way with construction of the proposed four-lane freeway.

Permit OK'd For Bruno Development

San Bruno planning commissioners on September 5 approved a "clearing and grubbing" permit for the new Bayhill Development along San Bruno Avenue.

The permit will allow the engineering firm of Moffatt and Nichol to clear only the dedicated streets within the development of tree stumps and debris prior to the issuance of a grading permit.

According to Assistant City Engineer Bill Lowe, the grading permit should be sought within ten days. He said there is a slight delay because it has not yet been engineeringly determined how the area will be filled. In the meantime it was decided by the developer to have the area cleaned up.

Developer Louis Douglas said it was the original intent of the never - before - issued permit to remove old barracks foundations and some old abandoned cars in the area, too.

Apparently these items now will have to be taken out after the issuance of a grading permit.

Commissioner Leon Miller offered an objection to issuing a clearing and grubbing permit, saying that in granting the permit the commissioners were in effect granting the grading permit.

The clearing and grubbing permit was granted with six standard conditions, including the requirement for a water truck for dust control being present at all times.

Clearing and grubbing operations will be going on from 7:30 a.m. through 5:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays only.

7 Peninsulans On Federal Grand Jury

Seven Peninsulans were chosen Wednesday to serve on two new federal grand juries in San Francisco. A four-month jury will handle the regular variety of federal crimes. The 18-month jury will specialize in hearing evidence presented by the Organized Crime Strike Force.

U.S. District Judge Stanley A. Weigel chose both juries from a list of 150 prospective jurors. Judge Weigel picked David R. Johnson, 27, of San Bruno as foreman of the four-month jury. Johnson is a computer operator-programmer with the Postal Service in San Mateo. Arthur C. Jinkerson, 59, of San Carlos, owner of Dewey Foods in San Francisco was picked as deputy foreman. Other Peninsula members of the four-month jury are Lenore Daschbacher of Atherton, Clyde Denning of South San Francisco and Betty Stachnke of Redwood City.

Bruno Truck Bids Asked

San Bruno's council has authorized the readvertising for bids on a pump and motor for the city's well number 14.

The engineer's estimate for the project was $27,500. Only three bids were received, the lowest being $32,396.

Assistant City Engineer Bill Lowe said that using the original specifications and with a margin of profit of 25 percent the bid should not be in excess of $29,000.

S.S.F. Aides Protest City Library Cutback

South San Francisco's Municipal Employes' Association last week protested elimination of wo library assistant positions from civil service.

Don Schechter, director of research for the Marine Engineering Beneficial Association, representing the South San Francisco employe group, charged that the positions were being converted to part-time jobs so as to evade civil service requirements.

City Manager Gale F. Dreisbach, however, asserted that the move was part of an agreement made with Librarian Robert Alvarez at budget time under which the money saved by cutting down the positions would be applied to the book budget. He added that the positions had been vacant for a long time.

Councilman William A. Borba, however, asserted that there were many unemployed people and that the position should be made full time so that a jobless breadwinner could be put to work rather than for a pair of part-time jobs going to people already having other jobs.

Dr. Alvarez' absence on vacation appeared to preclude anwering details on the situation. Mayor Frank Mammini ordered the matter put over until the next meeting, when Alvarez could testify.

Borba also asked for a breakdown on bills received from VTN, the private engineering firm who took over the city's engineering functions over his protests. Fred Hull, who directs the VTN's South South San Francisco operation as head of the newly created department of ecological development, offered to visit Borba at his place f business and go over the bills in detail.

"I want the public to hear this, too," Borba objected. "They have a stake . . . This was supposed to save the city $400,000 a year . . . without cutting down on the level of service."

"You can't evaluate the operation from one or two bills," Councilman Gordon T. Boblitt retorted. He and Councilman Warren Steinkamp urged waiting for some specific period of time — like three or four months — before trying to evaluate the new operation.

It was Councilman Patrick E. Ahern who raised objections to what appeared to be a routine recommendation by Hull to grant a permit to Southern Pacific to build a spur track across the Oyster Point Boulevard near Eccles Avenue to serve the Landtrom Co.

"Will this interfere with the widening of Oyster Point Boulevard?" he asked. "We've been demanding that all buildings be set back."

When Borba proposed holding over the request, Hull protested that the delay would cause the builder hardship, since the building is already going up.

"I would like to see a plan showing what we are approving," Ahern persisted.

When City Attorney John Noonan proposed adjourning to the next day to hear the builder, the councilman instead decided simply to hold the request over to the next meeting, September 16.

Youths Held For Theft

San Bruno police have booked two 22-year-olds for possession of stolen property—a small foreign car.

Police arrested Albert E. Hartman, of 503 Lomita Avenue, Millbrae, and Robert J. Hohler, of 181 Santa Dominga, San Bruno, this weekend.

According to police reports, a $1,505 vehicle was found in a garage at the Santa Dominga address.

Plant Funds

The city of South San Francisco was granted $2,970,000 today to construct a waste water sewage treatment plant, Congressman Paul McCloskey announced.

The grant was made in Washington, D.C. by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency after an application by City Engineer Louis H. Goss. It will serve a population of 79,000.

Steve Romano Combo At Nick's Wed. Thru Sun.

The Papagayo Room at Rockaway Beach, Pacifica, a colorful Mexican restaurant staffed by a team of experts, under the aegis of dynamic Nick Gust, owner, functions in such a capacity to bring about operation success. The master chef here has to be given a hearty slap on the back for his superb Mexican specialties of the house, which include Carne Aada (broiled steak with green peppers and onions served with a green enchilada and guacamole sauce and beans), and Enchiladas Mexicanas . . . Upstairs in the same beachside building is The Moonraker restaurant, where the menu caters to adherents of Epicureanism. Diners are raving about the Roast Rack of Lamb Kapama (a rack of lamb cooked to your individual taste, carved at your table). This Chef's Specialty is served Bouquitiere, with a special sauce . . . Facilities are available for private parties, banquets, wedding receptions and meetings at Nick's restaurant and lounge, also located along the Rockaway Beach shoreline. There's dancing five nights a week, too, with the Steve Romano Combo supplying the dance music on Wednesdays through Sundays. Whether its breakfast, lunch, dinner, a quick snack, or a cocktail in the lounge, there's everything to enrich each occasion.

IN RUSSO'S SPOTLIGHT — Thomas & Kane, two well-known veterans of the Nevada nitery circuit, entertain in the lounge of Russo's Distillery in San Bruno, this Friday and Saturday evening only. Thomas will be remembered by local music fans as the leader of the popular Hyde Street IV.

Ben. Franklin's Prime Rib Now Mon., Tues., Wed.

The Benjamin Franklin Hotel is now serving its popular $2.95 Prime Rib dinners on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, instead of the usual Mondays and Wednesdays. This should please the dine-out crowds, as this is one of the best buys on the Peninsula. The regular menu is also available. . . . Dapper Tom Saville, the "unofficial mayor of Third Avenue, San Mateo," headquarters at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, and the Greenwillow dining room is his usual Sunday morning breakfast stop. He orders the full "ham an' egg treatment," then (don't tell a soul) slices a banana, which he brings with him, to place on top of his hot cakes. This is something we bet Riley didn't even think to do . . . The atmosphere of the past has been retained at Scotty Campbell's, an award-winning restaurant in Redwood City. The traditional spirit of hospitality is evident in the courtesy of the owners and their staff. Family night is every night, and a selective menu to please every taste. Prime Ribs of Beef (cut to your preference), Steaks, Broiled Mahi Mahi and Barbecued Baby Ribs are mealtime features. For those who fancy wine with their meals, fine foreign and domestic bottlings are available.

Black Angus Chain Is A Whopping Success

San Mateo is steer country again. By that we mean Stuart Anderson's Black Angus restaurant, located at 477 Ninth Avenue, San Mateo, has been remodeled and is now open and serving the public with renewed enthusiasm.

Long-time customers and new people as well are flocking to this popular dining spot, which is just one of many in Anderson's chain which extends from his cattle farms in and around Seattle to San Diego.

What has made the Black Angus chain such a whopping success these past few years? It's predicated on U.S. choice meats in good size portions, and a Western decor that never deteriorates into that corny Wild Bill Hickok theme. All dinners are one price — $3.95, with the exception of the Texas rancher cuts, which are $4.95. And you have your choice of five different cuts of meat: top sirloin, old-fashioned rib steak, New York, Tenderloin en brochette. Each dinner comes complete with salad bowl, baked potato and toasted ranch bread.

Teachers of the San Bruno Park School District received a day in the woods Wednesday, before returning to their class- last week.

It was their annual pre-opening conference, held at the San Francisco YMCA camp at Jones Gulch at La Honda.

The conference was featured by a "Carnival of Ideas," consisting of exhibits of educational materials, techniques and activities by San Bruno teachers and specialists.

Main speaker was James D. MacConnell, professor of education and director of school planning laboratory at Stanford University.

Gus Xerogeanes, new principal of El Crystal and founder of outdoor education in this area, showed the teachers the outdoor education facilities San Bruno children will be using at Jones Gulch this year.

Three teachers, Ruth Campbell, Gerri Miller and Linda Morihata, gave a demonstration on teacher-made games, with stress on primary language arts. Jim Kramer demonstrated teaching techniques and ideas in language arts. Barbara Bartels showed a sixth grade reading and art project, "To Capture a Villain."

Dorothy Heruaf talked on art, Dorothy Sikert on math, and Ed Emling and Lou Foltz demonstrated development of the thinking processes in science.

Other demonstrations included music, folk dancing, physical education, health problems and British infant schools.

SANG-IN LEE

Only One Race of Man, Says Daly City Korean

"Hey, how do you say 'Welcome to Daly City' in Korean?" the assistant manager at the Westlake branch of American Savings and Loan Association, 5 Southgate Avenue, was asked.

"It would sound funny and besides take up a couple of sentences," said Sang-In Lee politely refusing. "Too much stress is placed on the novelty of foreign cultures."

"I've found in my travels people are basically the same no matter where you go," he explained patiently. Lee firmly subscribes to the belief that there is only one race of man — Homo sapiens.

He comes from very distinguished parentage . . . his father, first Minister of Foreign Capital of the Republic of Korea; his mother and aunt, professors of Home Economics, and grandfather, an eminent physician.

"The many high-ranking state officials and cabinet ministers who came from all over the country to pay their last respects at my father's funeral were a great consolation to my family," Lee reminisced.

His father, Ton-Je Ree, had served under the late President, Syng Man Rhee, who was considered the George Washington of Korea. He guided the restoration of the war-torn country following its liberation from the Japanese in 1945.

Ree's task was the management of the vital foreign aid funds.

Educated at Columbia University, Ree was considered an outcast under the Japanese regime because of his patriotic sympathies. Fearing chastisement, he left his job as a teacher at a Christian seminary and escaped to Manchuria. He quickly became Vice Minister of the Central Bank of Manchuria.

Periodically Ree smuggled himself back to Seoul to look after the welfare of his wife and four children until his homecoming after the liberation.

Young San-In was quite studious and managed in his high school years to learn English from visiting Americans. He even made an attempt to memorize the English dictionary.

After graduation he attended law school for two years. "It's not like law school here where four years pre-law schooling is required," noted Lee.

His post as interpreter and assistant to the Korean Army Chief of Staff was a source of pride. "I was a First Lieutenant in a position generally reserved for the rank of Major," Lee gleamed.

His father's urging to continue his education in America brought Lee to Pepperdine University in Los Angeles following military discharge.

He was often asked to speak before groups on his native land. "The questions always were directed toward Korean problems of war and poverty," Lee reflected. "I would much rather talk about the culture; you know, it dates back 4300 years, one of the world's oldest."

"It boasts an extremely high literacy rate and the lingering traditionalists are interesting," he said. "For instance, marriages are still arranged."

Working his way through college gave Lee his savings and loan career which enticed him to remain here. His part time S & L job became full time after he receive his Bachelor of Science degree.

Two of his sisters also came to stay in this country. One is a Los Angeles cello teacher and another is in Indiana teaching piano.

Sang-In joined American last May with a total of ten years experience. He likes sports, especially football and basketball, and is a buff on 19th Century European history.

NORTH PENINSULA LEAGUE PREVIEW

South San Francisco Gridders Favored Again

By JERRY LITTRELL

Three teams—but maybe not the three one has come to expect in the past -- will be vying for the football championship of the 'new look' North Peninsula League this season.

One change from the past: the traditional inter-city rivalry between South San Francisco and El Camino High Schools, which has almost always meant a league championship for the winner (which, by the way, has always been SSF) and was generally the last game on the schedule, has rotated again to the opening game of conference action this year.

This plus the fact that the Peninsula now has a lighted field at Terra Nova, a bonus for the rabid fans in Pacifica who raised the needed money last year, will make things interesting up north.

League coaches generally pick South San Francisco to repeat as NPL title holders because of a potentially explosive and seasoned offensive unit. But a new powerhouse could be emerging coastside in the form of the TN Tigers.

Having been fed a constant stream of championship material from the surging Pop Warner program in that area, Tiger head coach Bob Fisher has seemingly molded the Tigers' most powerful football team in its history.

So with Westmoor expected to have an off-year, the three title contenders are SSF, El Camino and the Tigers.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO

Ray DeJong's Warriors boast a tough three-game practice schedule (Capuchino, St. Ignatius and Crestmoor) before going against Camino in the conference opener. But with veteran quarterback Rhod Wallace leading the offense again this year the Warriors could have a powerful scoring machine going.

Joining Wallace in the backfield is fullback Dave Isham, a crunching runner who saw plenty of action last year, and halfback Rob Goldstein, the sophomore team's leading rusher two seasons ago. Vet flanker Tom Henkle and two strong tight ends, Ted Maynard and Wayne Munoz, give Wallace ample choice when the ground-oriented Warriors decided to take to the airways.

There is plenty of experience in the down-four linemen for SSF with Jeff Funcke, Lynn Simmons, Bob Britt and Paul Galeotti returning but the linebacking crew is new at the game and needs game time yet.

Camino's early-season hopes seem to rest on the right arm of senior quarterback Rudy Castellanos. Playing both ways last year Castellanos never did get his strong throwing arm untracked. But coach Tom McCormick has decided to keep the 6-2, 190-pound thrower just on offense and away from the defensive end slot this year, and the added rest could do wonders for the Colt offense.

Ken Acosta should handle the bulk of the running for Camino with backup help from Phil Marty, a talented junior who has been slowed so far with a muscle pull.

TERRA NOVA

Terra Nova has all sorts of seasoned players back led by fireplug halfback Louis Sanchez, a durable senior. John Salomon will inherit the quarterbacking duties and switch from his defensive back spot of '71 while Joe Racanelli, cousin to the Times' Athlete of the Year John Racanelli, will fill out the backfield.

Fisher anticipates having an excellent passing game with veteran catcher Gary Pruitt back along with tight ends Jim Kenning and Heinz Walters. For speed he can look to flanker Andy Nielson.

Traditionally the biggest team in the league season after season, the Tigers will be sacrificing size for quickness this year with Dave Bier (5-11, 185), John Decker (6-1, 180) and Jim Gonzalez (5-9, 205) anchoring the line.

HALF MOON BAY

Jerry Murphy's aerial circus and gridiron sideshow will again take the field this year with, probably, one of the more entertaining brands of football around. And at times the multi-faceted offense, which sends everyone including the team doctor and scorekeeper in motion at one time or another, has proven upsetting to opponents and makes HMB a serious long-shot bet.

The Cougars have an excellent thrower in senior Pete Peterson (6-2, 170) and veterans halfback Ron Stockman, Chris Wade and Bob Hunt in the backfield so there shouldn't be any problem scoring this year. Defense might prove touchy, though, even with All-NPL guard Brett Patterson coming back for another shot.

WESTMOOR

Traditionally one of the title-bound elevens in the NPL, Westmoor will apparently have to go through a grin-and-bear-it stage this year with a hodge-podge of untried athletes.

Graduation depleted a solid senior class. There were few juniors of first-string varsity caliber and the sophomore team went 1-8 last year. So coach Pete Matisi has patched together a youth-riddled contingent that may feature three sophomores (from last year's perfect 9-0 freshman team), including quarterback Harold Day and running back Dan Tong.

Lineman Leo Beidermann (6-6, 215) and linebacker Lance Judd may shore up a weakened defense but a lot rests on the youngsters in this learning year.

SERRAMONTE

Serramonte, Oceana and Jefferson will probably battle it out in the second division. The Regents have enough quarterbacks with Jesse Torres, last year's starter, back and Westmoor transfer Bob Cini available. Lance Gambol and Frank Bastore provide the running while Riordan transfer tackle Rich Lawson and Jim Matthewson give them 400 pounds-plus of beef up front.

OCEANA

Two-way tackle Art Thomas is a good beginning for the Oceana Sharks who have a covey of small and fast backs and a fair defense to start this season with. Either junior Tony Scoma or Bernie Kenneally will QB the Sharks while Tom McLennan and Stan Dickinson will get starting backfield spots but after that the Sharks could be a little thin up front.

JEFFERSON

Jefferson has a top-flight runner back in Greg King, who carried for over 500 yards in just half a season last year before breaking his arm, and a good pass receiver in Ernie O'Connor, who caught 33 aerials. But the Indians will be relying on a small and inexperienced front line and 6-3 quarterback Jerry Bartok, a senior playing his first year of football.

THE PICKS

This is the way NPL coaches have picked the upcoming race:

1. South SF
2. El Camino (tie with TN)
3. Terra Nova (tie with EC)
4. Half Moon Bay
5. Westmoor
6. Oceana
7. Serramonte
8. Jefferson

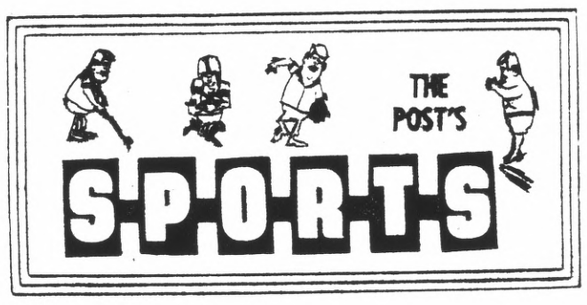
Baseball Nut's History Book



We don't ordinarily suggest reading material for fans of this column, but if you're a baseball fan and truly interested in the game as it has affected and been affected by history, society, and culture, you can do yourself a service by reading a two volume history of baseball by Dr. Harold Seymour, a university historian who also happens to be a baseball nut.

The titles are "Baseball, The Early Years," which traces the game up to the emergence of the American League as a genuine baseball power in the first few years of this century, and, "Baseball, The Golden Age," which brings you up into the fabulous '30's.

SEYMOUR, who writes more like a truly intelligent baseball writer than an historian, dispels a lot of myths (such as Abner Doubleday inventing baseball, Jackie Robinson being the first Negro major leaguer, baseball being introduced to the south by northern prisoners of the Civil War) offers many fascinating new facts (baseball owners in the '80's considered setting up a pro football league, there was a pitching machine being used in 1894, in the early days managers were forbidden to sit on the bench), and most of all, in the first volume especially, makes you realize that there just is nothing new under the sun — especially in baseball.

Not only was there a form of the farm system, supposedly "invented" by Branch Rickey half a century later, in 1883, but there was as much controversy over the reserve clause then as there is now!

JOHN MONTGOMERY WARD, one of the early great players, was also one of the leaders in the fight for the protection of players from despotic owners. But he once said that the "gravest offense" a player could commit was to break his contract, and publish a magazine article in which he stated that the majority of players felt the reserve clause, though abused, was a necessity.

You think you pay a lot of money to go to a baseball game nowadays? Before the turn of the century, the average man spent $2.50 at a game, which in that time was a full day's pay!

New things under the sun, you still insist? In those days baseball executives were worried about overexposure by the media (telegraph reports), and embarked on wild promotional extravagandas, such as kids' days, ladies' days, giveaway days, and pre-game entertainment.

You think guys like Rick Barry invented multiple signings? In the 1890's, it was actually common-place for baseball players to sign more than one contract, and when, periodically, new leagues sprung up to challenge the monopoly of the National League and raided its teams, it wasn't unusual for all of the teams in the "pirate" league to chip in and pay the exorbitant salaries (sometimes up to $2500!) some of the financially weak clubs had to pay stars in order to spirit them away from NL clubs.

ATHLETES LIKE BARRY were called "rounders" or "revolvers." They would sign agreements with teams, sometimes even accept advance compensations, and then move elsewhere in response to better offers, and damn any written agreements.

Detractors of modern baseball may think that it is corrupt in places, but it was fairly common well into this century for owners to have stock in rival clubs. One of the more blatant examples of duplicity in those days was one Ned Hanlon, who managed Brooklyn and was president of Baltimore!

Nor were the notorious Black Sox the only fixers in the history of the game. That practice dates back to the 1870's, without a lot of interruption until Judge Kennesaw Mountain Landis became commissioner of baseball.

You think Charley Finley has novel ideas? Before the turn of the century there was much serious discussion over designated pinch-hitters, and in 1894 Chicago owner Jim Hart suggested that players have numbers sewn on the backs of their uniforms. He was dismissed as a heretic, and numbers didn't appear on uniforms until the 1930's.

Baseball purists also complained, in the 1890's, about the balls being too lively and the batters concentrating too much on going "for the long hit ball."

AMONG OTHER myths exploded by Seymour is the one that the old Baltimore Orioles of the '90's were the best team in baseball (during that decade they won three pennants. Boston won five), and also the toughest and most durable (John McGraw was once sidelined for more than a week with sore tonsils, and "Uncle" Wilbert Robinson was out once for amonth with a simple ankle sprain.)

And believe it or not, those "ancients" had some ideas about a how to run baseball that might still apply better than a lot of things we're doing now.

The Players' National League of Baseball Clubs (an organization formed by a union of dissatisfied big leaguers), for example, formed in 1889 as "a democratic alliance of workers and capitalists in which both were to participate in the government and share in the profits of the enterprise." In other words, they set up some complicated machinery whereby the players shared with the executives not only in the operation of the teams, but in the profits, as well.

Perhaps the most unique idea of the time was a plan whereby players were paid according to their behavior.

Here's how Seymour describes it:

"During the winter of 1888 the magnates tried to solve their two problems of high salaries and misconduct with one piece of legislation, the notorious Classification Plan . . . The idea provided for the classification of all players into five groups, according to their 'habits, earnestness, and special qualifications' . . . Depending upon the category in which they were placed, the players were to be paid as follows: Class A, $2500; Class B, $2250; Class C, $2000; Class D, $1750; Class E, $1500 . . . In other words, personal conduct, as graded by the managers and owners, was to be a terminant of a player's salary."

THERE IS, of course, much, much more in Seymour's fine first volume, and the second volume, which is now being read, promises to be just as good. When it's finished, we'll make a report on that one, too. Considering our reading speed, you can expect it at the next All Star break.

Odd Squad Holds D.C. League Lead

In the National League, the race continued to be close in Daly City slow pitch softball. In last week's action, Bader's Jewelers downed Gem Meats, 7-3, to remain in a three way tie for second place.

Jeff Simon and Gary Bader each collected two hits for the Jewelers. Gary Bader also played an outstanding defensive game as he handled 10 chances without error. The Sluggin' Fools, with the aid of Joe Skaar along with Donald Carter's long balls defeated Able Building, 18-10.

Leighton AhPo and Lou Matteucci were outstanding on defense for the Fools as they spun an impenetrable web through the middle of the diamond. The Pomona Casuals edged the Soul Patrol, 6-3, with a great team effort.

In the big battle over first place, the Odd Squad took nine innings to quiet the Whispers. It took a clutch homer by Mike Schmidt in the seventh to give Rich Brewer his opportunity to hit a two run shot to provide the margin of victory for the Odd Squad. Dennis Flannery and Steve Roche collected three hits each for the Odd Squad.

PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE

The Round Table Knights moved into undisputed first place by edging J&J Plumbing, 11-9 in a closely fought ball game. Both teams locked great but as in all ball games, only Knights claimed the win. The Nomads picked up their first win by defeating the winless Longs Drugs team, 13-9. The Nomads were led by the hitting of Jerry Neves (4 for 4) and Neal Gouveia 3 for 4). The Blankers, after their opening game loss have become a team to be recorded with as they rolled up the World of Carpets 14-8. Frank Hunt played an outstanding game on defense for the Blankers in a game that featured good hitting by both teams. Western Dental extracted a tough 5-3 win over Melody Toycta and moved into a tie for third place in the Pacific Coast League standings. Defense was the name of the game as Clear Lachusa, John Moran and Bob Scott were enough to make Melody Toyota sing a different song.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Gino's Lounge, by virtue of their 9-8 win over the Brothers IV, has moved into sole possession of first place in the American League. In a game that turned out to be a homerun barrage, Gino's came from an 8-3 deficit to overtake the Brothers IV and go away with a 9-8 victory.

Steve Green cranked up and hit two shots into the greenery at Marchbanks to lead Gino's attack. Doug Golub hit a two run homer to tie the score and John Nutting hit another for the tie breaker. Canco unwound and defeated the Marauders 7-3. Art Harris collected three hits in four trips for Canco. George Marcillac, at third base, made numerous outstanding plays for Canco. Nestle continues to look impressive in the American League.

This week, they crushed the Emanons, 14-2. The hitting of the Boston Brothers and the fine pitching of Ralph McDonald proved to be too much for the Emanons.

Bruno 4-H Club Is a Tribute to Perseverance

By JACK BIK

Farmers in San Bruno?

A farm youth club would appear to be one of the unlikeliest organizations one can expect to find in a closely built suburban area. Yet, one of the most active clubs in San Bruno turns out to be 4-H Club.

It's biggest problem isn't finding a place to raise their animals. Nor is it auctioning them off. It's saying goodbye to them at auction time.

"I'm not going to cry this time," Lisa French promised her mother, Mrs. Jean French, leader of the local 4-H, as she auctioned off her steer for a record price during last months annual livestock auction at the San Mateo County Fair.

After all, Mrs. French confided, Lisa, who has been in 4-H for many years, is now 16 years old. Nevertheless, Lisa could not help but shed a tear for the 1050-pound animal whom she had fed and cared for during the previous year.

"Steers make good pets," Mrs. French explained, "they can be so affectionate . . . It's easier to get over a lamb."

Lisa got 75 cents a pound for her steer, which she acquired as a calf nine months before, thus making a $350 profit. She received a smaller profit for a lamb she was raising.

Probably the major program of the local 4-H Club is raising lambs.

The San Bruno Lions Club donated $2000 some years ago, which is kept as a revolving fund in a special account at the Bank of California. The first year in the steer program, a child receives a loan of $400, part of which must be spent for supplies which can be used in future years. When he sells the animal, at auction time, he repays the loan, pockets the profit, and then borrows $350.

The local 4-H has room for only six steers at their farm, which thus limits the program. There is room for many more lambs, however, which cost just $30 and which need to be taken care of only three to four months before auction time.

Place Needed

Until recently, the biggest problem was indeed to find a place to raise their animals. How the problem was solved is a story in itself.

The San Bruno 4-H Club had a small pen area by the railroad tracks on land that was owned by the San Francisco Airport. One day the airport decided to fill the area for a site for a new Pan-American commissary building — and wiped out the farm.

Then started a long and discouraging search for a new farm.

For a while, the group used part of Junipero Serra Park, and then part of the Millbrae Spur, but this did not work out. Finally, the city gave the 4-H Club a sixth of an acre site in an unused corner of the Belle Air Park. Only, when the club startd to make their plans for their farm layout, they found the land actually belonged to the San Bruno Park School District.

It happened that the then school superintendent, George Lawry, was a former 4-H boy, and was happy to make the unused land available to the club.

The next problem arose when the club leaders next went to check over their land — and found it under water. They talked to assistant city engineer Wilford Lowe, who had been a 4-H forestry leader. He explained that the land was the lowest part of San Bruno, and advised them to get three feet of fill.

Thus began the first in a constant series of begging, borrowing and promoting material and labor which ran into many thousands of dollars of value.

The airport and the dirt fill contractor who had inadvertently destroyed the old farm diverted an occasional truck to the farm, for a total of $5000 worth of fill. Donations of extra concrete were received from a half-dozen firms.

Various local service clubs were pressed into service.

The San Bruno Lions lub brought thirty people down one weekend to put up a clubhouse and lamb pens. The Rotary Club turned out in subsequent work weekend. The Kiwanis Club donated some $160 for pipes.

A number of the members' fathers proved particularly helpful. Dave Mojas, whose children were in the horse program, and who is a major local builder, designed the buildings and helped obtain much material at cost. Charles Kohler, a cement firm official, brought down a work crew.

At one time, when local civic clubs ran out of available funds, and the 4-H found they needed $1000 to take advantage of available donations and volunteer labor, they went out and raised the money themselves.

The Lions donated some $2000 for materials while the Rotary gave $1000 as a memoriam to Ad Holmes, who had recently died and who "loved children."

Mrs. French went through numerous struggles — which would have discouraged most other people — to obtain water and power for the farm. She failed in her efforts to obtain a donation from the city, as well as installation of lighting, but three of the councilmen, Neil Christal, Tony Governale and George Corey, obtained a great deal of help for the farm on their own; the city also cooperated in other ways. Help from the electrical union finally sewed up the matter of lighting, considered essential for fighting vandalism.

The initial problem of vandalism — apparently arising out of curiosity from neighborhood children — was solved when Mrs. French and her fellow leaders went to Belle Air School, talked to the PTA, took children on tours of the farm, and even gave them horseback rides.

The club is now looking forward to dedicating the farm within a few weeks. A plaque is being prepared specially honoring the six major donors who gave $1000 to $6000 apiece, as well as some 105 other donors.

Meanwhile, the children — some 65 residents mostly of San Bruno and Millbrae — will be honored at the annual achievement awards program, September 24, at a 1 p.m. luncheon at El Rancho Motel.

Many San Bruno and Millbrae children have already been honored at the San Mateo County Fair, which represents the high point of the 4-H year. In fact, most members delay their vacations until after the fair is over.

Lynn LoReaux received a trophy for the best wildlife exhibit at the fair. Three girls received trophies for fancy cake decorations: Melanie Buchanan, lady with a skirt; Kathy Bogdonoff, jack in box, and Lisa French, a mod cake.

These were just a few of the awards which brought local members premium money as well as ribbons. Scholarships to college are also won by local members, donated by various firms interested in promoting farming.

Biggest cash, of course, was in the annual junior livestock auction, where the San Bruno members received a total of $72.000, up from $50,000 last year.

In addition the steers and lambs, there are numerous other programs in 4-H. Children are raising racing pigeons, poultry, rabbits and even breeding dogs. Under one program, the children take care of Seeing Eye dogs from the time they are puppies, until they are old enough to turn over to the Seeing Eye school.

Other programs include clothing, foods and nutrition, electrical, woodworking, and home furnishings. This fall, Mrs. French says, they plan to start a farm management and maintenance program to try to win a national award in landscaping and farming. Six children are to be selected for this program.

The San Bruno club will be a prominent part of a film being produced by the University of California on "4-H Today," for national showing.

Biggest need at present is for leaders in various fields, according to Mrs. French.

Mrs. French, herself, is an experienced hand at promoting clubs, having organized a sailing club and a ski club when she and her husband lived in Detroit.

San Bruno Girl, Dog Place First

Heel, sit, stay, come, down, stand. All dogs can be trained if their owners know how. There are eight recent graduates of a dog obedience training course sponsored by the Peninsula Humane Society who'll vouch for it.

The ten-week course made available to the Society's junior members was taught by Linda Fish and Dorie Van Alstyne, both members of the Belmont Hills Dog Training Club. "One of the best things people can do for their dogs is to train them properly, to make their pets good citizens," commented Linda. "Both the owner and the dog will experience a new respect and admiration for each other."

Ryan Urges Action on Conservation

The federal government had better redefine its national priorities before it runs out of energy and money, Congressional candidate Leo J. Ryan said Thursdayo n his return from a study tour of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

Ryan said the trip had "opened my eyes" to the need for immediate action concerning conservation of national resources and finding new reservoirs of energy.

While condemning the tragic events of the past week in Munich, and the senseless killings of the past, Ryan said "this pretty well shows what happens when people are backed against a wall."

While much money and effort is now being expended to tap oil deposits around the world, very little, if any, government studies have been made in researching methods of using the sun's rays and ocean tides as a source of energy, Ryan said.

Ryan is a member of the Assembly Commerce and Public Utilities Committee and repeatedly expressed concern about meeting the spiraling energy demands without further destroying the enviroment at a meeting in his South San Francisco offices.

Prudhoe Bay in the far Arctic region is where Ryan, accompanied by other government officials and representatives of a conglomerate known as the Pacific Lighting Company of Los Angeles, surveyed the complex problem of drilling and transporting oil across the vast tundra to southern ship ports.

Conservationists have expressed concern for what the giant pipeline would do to the environment.

Purpose of a present $25 million study being undertaken by the joint venture oil group in Alaska is to figure out ways of handling the ecological balance once the pipeline is in, Ryan explained.

He said he was for the pipeline and centered his talk more on the impact of the United States not preparing now for an energy crisis that, he predicted, would hit the country within the next 20 years.

The East Coast is already experiencing what happens when utilities do not meet consumer needs, Ryan said.

Recent "brownouts" and "total energy blackouts" have cut off power to homes and hospitals, leaving cities powerless, in the East, he pointed out.

Unless new sources are found — and soon — the U.S. may find itself in the same position as the Arab nations, Ryan said.

The reason for bitter fighting between these two nations — reflected in the death this week of 11 Israeli Olympians by Arab terrorists — is the continuing argument over land and the resources contained therein, he said.

"There is a very severe energy crisis" worldwide. A dwindling supply of fossil material (oil and coal) could spark a situation within this country similar to that in Arab nations, according to Ryan.

As the United States finds itself falling behind in oil stockpiles and sources to replenish this supply, coupled with an increased population, hysteria might replace reasoning and more vigorous searches conducted in other lands Ryan ventured.

"With this in mind, I suggested this government began studying other means of fulfilling this energy requirement . . . perhaps by readjusting its national priorities.

"And we'd better find them (the alternatives) quickly or we're through," Ryan said.

Millbrae Workshop Will Open

A unique theatre workshop opens this week, possibly the only one on the Peninsula outside of ACT in San Francisco. A former high school drama instructor as well as a professional actor, Roy Casstevens has transformed the old Millbrae Players Theatre into the Broadway Theatre Workshop where he will offer courses in acting and musical theatre for adults as well as high school and junior high school students.

In addition to the classes, Casstevens has also scheduled several productions for public presentations. Students enrolled in the workshop will have an opportunity to participate in these productions.

A Bachelor of Arts graduate of San Francisco State College where he appeared in numerous musical productions, Casstevens is best known to San Mateo residents for creating the role of "Schroeder" in San Francisco's longest running musical hit, "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown." Previously, he had appeared in the Hyatt Music Children's Theatre productions of "Cinderella," "The Pied Piper," and "The Emperor's New Clothes."

In opening the Broadway Theatre Workshop, Casstevens "hopes to bring to the community quality training for young people and adults resulting in outstanding productions for people of all ages."

Millbrae History Meet

The history of Millbrae and the Mills Estate will be the subject for the Millbrae Historical Society's first meeting of the fall season, September 27.

President Mrs. Sten Carlson said Dr. Peter Conmy would be the speaker for the 8 p.m. meeting at the city library auditorium.

Officials of the Bank of California, founded by Darius Ogden Mills, will be special guests.

Dr. Conmy was the society's speaker a year ago, President Carlson recalled, and drew a "standing room only" crowd.

Discovering Joy's Meaning

"Nothing in the universe exists alone. Every drop of water, every human being, all creatures in the web of life, and all ideas in the web of knowledge are part of an immense, evolving dynamic whole as old, and as young, as the universe itself. To learn this is to discover the meaning of joy."

DAVID CAVAGNARO finds joy with the components beauty and purpose, in things that many men ignore. In the contemplation of a drop of water, or the life cycle of plants, or the shape of the hills, or the habits of animals, in short of nature itself, he finds a pattern for living.

He writes that in the natural world "there is a mysterious quality in the perfection of growth and the harmony of many creatures living together in balance."

Thinking of this balance in Nature he writes that men should learn that among all the families of living things — men, animals, plants — no being "is more important than any other except in his own eyes."

Thinking of the harmony he finds in nature, he uses photographs and words to point out to readers that principles of nature that are universal and must be discovered.

IN HIS BOOK, "Living Water," he pictures many things, in nature, each doing its bit to serve the rest of the world.

"By forest leaf that shades and the root that penetrates, the snowpack is delayed in its melting, water is held back in the soil, erosion is tempered in the foothills, and in the valley far below the farmers' crops are sustained."

"Living Water" is the combined effort of David Cavagnaro — writer, photographer and teacher — and Ernest Braum, photographer. It is a beautiful book with 112 colored photographs to accompany Cavagnaro's words.

In preparing their book, Cavagnaro and Braum found nothing too small to show pattern and purpose in creation. Yet they hold firmly to the principle that subjective artistic expression (and thought) and objective scientific fact are compatible.

A SECOND volume of David Cavagnaro's work called "Living Earth" is slated for a fall publishing date.

For an article entitled Meadow Morning, Cavagnaro accompanied his photographs with a meaningful essay. (Audubon, November 1970)

"A meadow — In California,
A morning. Many mornings.
Many seasons.
Water.
As fog. As dew.
Or transportation.
Sun. Early. Late —
One thousand rainbows.
In a spider web.
Life — Beauty.
Transitory — Hidden —
A photographer.
Young. Unknown. Creative.
Unfettered by tradition.
A discovery. A discoverer,
Of a meadow morning."

Each word and each strange but lovely picture that Cavagnaro produces is a discovery.

He Made It In the County

Year after year I watch talented Peninsula artists go forth into the world in pursuit of the professional — work, that is. They get their schooling at local dance studios, private piano lessons or voice coaches, only to leave the environs to find employment on New York and European stages.

Ken Ortega, the 22-year-old lead in the rock musical "Hair," now in its farewell tour at the Orpheum Theater through Wednesday and at the San Jose Civic Auditorium, September 14 through 16, is one of the exceptions. He made it before he ever got a chance to leave San Mateo County.

Wherever there was dance or theater being performed, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Octavia Ortega of Redwood City was involved. It began back when he was 13 years old and performed for three seasons under Herb Redgers at Hyatt Music Theater. He'd studied dancing with Dorothy Roberts and Richard Gibson in San Mateo since he was six years old, so at 13 performing came natural.

While still a junior at Sequoia High School where he took part in every show the drama department staged, he was working at night either performing or rehearsing at the Hyatt legitimate roundhouse in Burlingame.

By the time Circle Star Theater opened up, he was experienced enough to work as an apprentice at the same time as choreographing their children's shows. And at the same time, choreograph and direct five shows for the Redwood City Civic Opera, sponsored by the recreation department.

I was one of the judges that awarded him a $500 scholarship (put up by Jean Martin's Women's Guild) that he planned to use as tuition to the Pasadena Playhouse.

"It was my big dream until I heard they were folding. So I went to Canada College where there was a good dance and drama department."

"At about that time I was afraid to get too involved in theater as a profession because it can be so heartbreaking. But the last four years have been the happiest, most exciting and educational of my life."

Despite the opportunity he'd had before a critical public in professional shows such as "Sweet Bird of Youth" with Shelly Winters at Circle Star; "The Last Sweet Days of Isaac" which ACT produced at the Marines Theater; and in the Warner's Bros. film "Strawberry Statement," filmed partially in San Francisco, he says he was "scared to death going into Hair, even as Berger's understudy for a yar durng the orignal San Francisco production.

Now for the past 19 months, having brought the tribal message of love into some 43 states and all the provinces in Canada, he's been playing the central character of Berger.

"I've been lucky. Ever since the age of 13, I've never been out of a show except for 3½ weeks between jobs."

In My Opinion

Subvention of Chambers

By BOB PETERSON

Regardless of what the San Mateo chamber would have me believe (and I get my information from the San Mateo Chamber) it receives some $45,000 annually from the City of San Mateo.

Of course this money is not considered a subvention of any kind. No. It's made up of "accounts" of $14,500 for business promotion, $18,720 for convention and visitors' promotion and $12,000 for Christmas decorations.

These figures, derived from the city of San Mateo, are part of a 1972-73 Associated Peninsula Chambers Strength Survey.

I previously questioned how much a city should subsidize a chamber, based mostly on the request of the South San Francisco Chamber to obtain more city funds for its operation.

At least that chamber's figures were made available, and not hidden in some bookkeeping arrangement that would have people believe they don't need the city's assistance.

Some other interesting tidbits came to my attention regarding city funding of chambers.

According to the 1970 (most recent) figures in a United States Chamber of Commerce survey, the average chamber in the 20,000 to 25,000 population category nationwide receives $23,350 in local government funding. A survey of California chambers in cities of 30,000 to 40,000 population shows the average city subvention to be $20,500. And the average city funding to full-time chambers in San Mateo County is $16,400.

In the "Journal," esoteric publication of the American Chamber of Commerce Executives, an article in the May 1972 issue titled "The years ahead" says that ". . . the chamber will create a development corporation which will develop and carry through the plans of the community . . ."

HOW WILL this be financed? According to the article by "special assessments on business and from fees in contracting for services provided to local, county, state and federal governments and with businesses within the city, region and state." Not more than 10 to 15-percent financing will come from dues.

The role of the chamber in a word is changing.

Jerry Chandler, the dynamic young director of the San Bruno Chamber of Commerce, a year ago projected what the future purpose and goals of chambers of commerce should be in a speech to the Golden Gate (Northern California) Association of Chamber of Commerce Executives.

If many chambers continue doing what they have been doing, there won't be any purpose in looking to the future and setting goals because they will be out of business, according to Chandler.

"We must stop wasting our time and resources on activities that are frivolous for the type of leadership we are supposed to provide in the community," he said.

Chandler says chambers must change their thinking to increase or modify activities not only in the business but in the general community.

"THERE ARE MANY communities, for instance that raise and spend from $3,000 to $10,000 putting on a beauty pageant. Think of the good that could be accomplished in a community if that money was re-channeled to positive community uses."

He gave, as another example, the community parade. "It takes a great deal of time, effort and money to put on a parade. Again, many positive programs could be instituted with the same time and money," said Chandler. He suggested that service clubs could handle activities such as these.

The chamber of the future must be the catalyst of personal community participation, according to Chandler. "Because we are receiving tax funds we have a responsibility to get involved with the total community."

He suggested that a chamber should find ways to stop pollution. "I'm sure in many areas we overlook polluters because they are a member or are important to the economy."

HE SAID CHAMBERS shouldn't be afraid of asking governmental officials for funds. "We better find out now if the money we receive is payment for not rocking the boat, or for services performed."

Chandler also suggested that since business pays the majority of taxes, chambers should take the lead in consolidation of cities, "which are so close you can't tell one from the other."

And he didn't leave out the possibility of chamber consolidation. "Since most of us continually have financial problems, one well financed well staffed chamber could be more beneficial to an area that three or four who are the opposite," said Chandler.

"WE MUST also find ways to convince other similar groups to merge with us so all problem solving energies are focused in one direction.

"If we don't take the lead, some other organization will, and we may find ourselves out of date and out of business."

To that I can only add, "right on."

Four Deaths Monthly of Inhaling Products

By LORENE BEASLEY

In June 1970, the National Commission on Product Safety reported that 110,000 persons were permanently disabled and 30,000 killed annually in the home as the result of incidents connected with consumer products.

A 15-year-old boy recently died after inhaling a clear, pure, vegetable coating that gives a no-stick surface to all cookware. Although the product does perform this function as advertised, it also had the additional power of being able to paralyze the respiratory muscles of a human being.

A spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration reports that it is not unusual for four deaths a month to be reported since the practice of inhaling became popular among the young people.

PAM is one of the few aerosols that carries a label warning that its fumes can be dangerous. In small print on the Pam can label the warning reads "Caution: Use only as directed. Intentional misuse by deliberately concentrating and inhaling the contents can be fatal. Keep out of reach of children." But there is no law against a child buying any spray can.

The ingredients of Pam are listed on the bottom of the label. "Made of lecithin, a pure vegetable product, with propellent." According to a member of the staff of the Poison Control Center at Children's Orthopedic Hospital, Seattle, Freon, a propellant ingredient used in spray products, has been identified as probably the toxic in the can when misused.

Most of the sprays found on any supermarket shelf contain flurocarbons, known under the Du Pont trade name as Freon. Some products contain other propellents but almost any spray can cause fatal heart fluttering in a child.

BECAUSE FERON has been accepted as safe for use in food over a long period of time it has not been subjected to safety tests by the FDA in the past 10 years. Last year FDA conferred with the industry and the commission's report is expected in 1973 on what research should be done to prove the long-term use of Freon safe.

This summer the Senate passed bill S.3419, The Food, Drug and Consumer Safety Act of 1972. This legislation would mandate a new independent agency to regulate the safety of consumer products used in and around the household. However, the House version of the bill has not yet reached the House floor.

In the meantime, the FDA and Du Pont say they do not know of any other safe substitute for fluorocarbons nor do they have any way to make aerosol products unattractive to thrill-seekers.

No Cheerful Note to Find

This column is usually hopeful about the course of human events, but it finds no cheerful note in the present butchery going on in the world. Terrorism is enjoying a busy season, and reflection gives little hope of its early cessation.

There are, it seems, two types of terrorism. One is planned, organized, or at least knowingly sponsored by nations or large groups of organized peoples. The other is spontaneous, the murderous actions of a few persons or individuals acting without the knowledge of larger and more responsible groups, and whose dark acts are a matter of individual and not collective responsibility.

The two types of terroism are difficult to distinguish. Was the thrower of a bomb his own man or a cog in larger machinery? In each case the answer can be quite obscure. The essence of conspiracy is secretiveness, and the degree of involvement of others can vary from direct, as in the case of paid mercenaries and agents provacateur; to indirect as in the case of suppliers of food, arms and transportation; and to approval or condonation, as in the case of nations that provide sanctuary.

Regardless of the degree of culpability, those acts of butchery in which governments are involved will prove the easier to handle. In these instances there is some larger body against which reprisals can be directed. An example is found in Israeli enforcement of the essential principle that a government is responsible for acts committed on or from its soil. Sanctions can be exerted. World opinion will turn against such a government's legitimate and lawful activities. Allies will flee.

Governments involved in terrorism must pay a price, and the pure force of arms, opinion, and political reaction can slow down their participation. But what about crazed individuals or small bands that function as death's messenger on their own? In this day of universal explosives and instant machines guns, a few insane killers can do as much or more harm than their more sophisticated brethren.

What is more, their acts are almost impossible to deter. Their missions are usually suicidal, and, as a result, punishment provides no threat. These men, if they are to be stopped at all, must be reached in other ways.

The only practical way to slow their madness is to reduce motivation, and this process may be long and difficult. Their violence springs from the inflammatory writings, speeches and published thoughts of others.

Historically, the power of philosophical violence can be seen in the writings of the anarchists near the turn of the century. Those who started the then unprecedented course of assassinations and attempted assassinations of kings, princes, czar and presidents were men of letters, not of violent action. Their ideas were acted upon by a strange assortment of loners who individually transformed preaching into terror.

In a modern world of nearly four billion people, almost all of whom have access to the instruments of violence, ideas that advocate terror as the solution to social, economic and political ills will find plenty of eager activists. Unfortunately, there is an abundance of such dangerous thought and rhetoric at this moment of history.

The only way out of meaningless brutality and death of innocents is for the world to cool its philosophical differences and its angry words. It is one thing for a leader, under reasonable personal control to speak with fury, but it is tragically another when the less stable move to ugly action under the influence of such words.

Cooling it is something that won't happen short term. The chances of convincing world leaderships to calm the angry rhetoric are presently small. It will take time to convince men that hot phrases on high lead to hot deeds by those less well placed. Even after such conviction, it will take years for the present furies to burn out.

For these reasons, it seems that our sorry globe faces new acts of terror even if nations withdrew from direct participation in acts of sporadic violence. The time has come, however, for realistic reaction to the language of hate and animosity. No man anywhere on earth will be safe unless this is done.

Needn't Admire Them

Editor, The Post:

I very much approve of trying to improve relations with the Soviet Union but nowhere does it say that we have to admire them or shut our eyes to their inhumanities.

Here is a nation which spends billions and billions of rubles on its military establishment and yet stoops to greed and blackmail in its dealings with those Jews who apply for visas to leave.

To cite but a few of such instances: If we send $100 to a starving Russian Jew who has lost his means of livelihood simply because he dared apply for an exit visa, $40 of that goes to the government! Did you ever hear of such a thing?

If he is one of the few fortunate ones who is finally granted an exit visa, he is before departure stripped of all of his possessions, except for $100.

And now this latest monstrous inhumanity! To exact $5000 to $25,000 as ransom from those wishing to leave. Is there any difference between the Soviet Union and a skyjacker or kidnaper who holds for ransom innocent victims? The skyjacker or kidnaper is put away where he can no longer harm society, but how does one deal with a nation which is guilty of such criminal extortion?

The "New Tsars" of the Soviet Union are dragging the honor of a once-proud nation through the mire and one can only recoil with horror.

WE SPENT THE Labor Day weekend "At the Lake." For those folks who aren't included in the jet set category, this simply means we went to Lake Tahoe to visit our long-lost money. We aren't the only ones that visit The Lake and take a swim. Such is life.

FOR THE FIRST time we caught the Lawrence Welk Show at Harrah's Club on the South Shore. We can say this with firsthand authority: Welk's show is far better than his golf game. That's not to say he doesn't play a great game of golf; he does. But his show is a real stopper. The only thing wrong with Welk's style and musical scores is he brings back too many memories, things that can never be again. And if they don't stop raising the menu price we can never go again.

IT'S LITTLE WONDER there are so many middle and older folks in his audience. Welk doesn't polka around the floor anymore. Now he waltzes. Even that's more than we do.

THERE WERE ALL sorts of Labor Day doings around the Bay. Some folks stayed home (the smart ones). Others attended gala bar-b-ques. The latter is interesting, indeed.

ANNUALLY (OUR SOURCE TELLS) Colma Councilman Raymond Ottoboni, one of the city's bigger property owners and father of the city's Chief of Police (not to mention he is also Planning Commission chairman), hosts a get-together for his cronies (oops, we mean "friends"). Among the celebrated guests this year was none other than Daly City Councilman McRobert Stewart and S.M. County Supervisor Ged Day. Mr. Ottoboni has other friends on the S.M. County Board of Supervisors also, namely Robert St. Clair. St. Clair and Ottoboni reportedly travel afar together to yon forests where they slaughter deer, in a sportsmanlike manner, of course. (Did you ever notice how many times we put "of course" at the end of a sentence?)

MUSINGS — Funny how St. Clair knows the way to Colma, but is hardly ever around Daly City anymore. Wasn't Daly City where he got his start? How quiet these supervisors are concerning the North County . . . between elections. We hasten to add not all are this way. At least one is active in the North. You need only read the papers to learn which one we mean and the work is appreciated.

SICK CALL — Broadmoor Police Chief Ray Savage (the terror of the golf links) doing nicely at Kaiser in South City following a heart jolt. No visitors. Send a card at least — Assembly candidate Lou Papan layed up since last week with high fever and bad ear infection. Promises to get better before his campaign kickoff dinner tomorrow at Daly City's War Memorial building.

POLICE BLOTTER — The efforts of Daly City's Police Capt. Dave Hansen and Sgt. Ed Guzman (et al) have paid off. After pushing for tighter public protection measures along that path between D.C. and S.F., near the San Francisco Country Club, the city has built a chain link fence. There have been several cases of women being assaulted and suffering "a fate worse than death" along this infamous shortcut . . . We apologize to Guzman for referring to him in a recent column as Officer Guzman. (That's no Officer, Officer, that's my Sergeant??) . . .

STILL ON THE BEAT: D.C. Police voted for that new retirement plan the other day. Results: 72 for and 1 against.

QUESTIONS WE Always Wanted to Ask, But Were Afraid To: After many years the letterhead on the Peninsula Police Officers' Association has removed the name of Colma. (Why?) After all these years of NOT being a member of the North County Council of Cities, Colma's name is ON their letterhead. (Why?)

AND DIDJA know statisticians have figured out the best time to pass a bond issue for parks and open space is just before vacation time. Dare we point out that upcoming Proposition A, for the purchase of parks and open space, is on the November ballot? Wanna bet on the outcome?

THE 44th ANNUAL Policemen's Ball will be held at the Fiesta Building, S.M. Fairgrounds, September 23 with Johnny Vaughn and his orchestra. The money (one buck per) goes to aid widows and orphans of cops. Try to make it, hear?

NO RESPECT, that's the trouble with this world. No respect at all. That columnist for a S.F. nightly newspepper borrowed some stuff from one of my stories on the Daly City census and didn't even say "boo." Now that we think about it, why theheckwould he say "boo" (unless he was one of those guys who have been frequenting that path we told you about earlier). But it's kinda nice to know the Big City guys are reading our humble little bulletin.

WE WANNA BE a city councilman — Because they get to travel all over the place just like the freewheelers in the school district. Between now and next month the D.C. council, as example, have the chance to go to Anaheim, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Miami and Berkeley? Some officials get to go to Montreal, Carmel, New Orleans and just everywhere. As one taxpayer grumbled: "I don't mind some of them going, if they just wouldn't come back."

WELL WE WENT, and we came back, to the Fourth Annua D&J Golf Safari held each September at the Nugget in Sparks. This year 194 duffers safaried (?) to Nevada with Dino Donati and George Johnson to play the links at Washoe and Lakeridge — the latter a humbler designed by golf sadist Robert Trent Jones. We'll tell you more about the jaunt, and about some of the guys that went, later. See ya!

N.Y. Cyclists Arrive For San Mateo Visit

By ALAN QUALE

Perry Brown and Nelson Chenkin got on their ten-speed bicycles three months ago in New York City, pedalled through Manhattan and across the George Washington Bridge.

Their destination?

San Mateo—3200 miles away.

Both young men are New York City born and raised, 23-years-old, and were unfamiliar with camping and the out-of-doors. They were also unfamiliar with bicycling—Perry bought his bike the summer before and Nelson purchased his ten-speed "just before the trip."

Perry said the idea to pedal cross-country to his uncle, Lee Pitt's home in San Mateo, "just sort of built up."

"But we had no idea what we were getting into," Nelson added.

During the next three months, the two pedalled head-on into a prevailing west wind that sometimes buffeted them by 40-miles-per-hour. They also encountered 110-degree desert heat, a 34-degree mountain snowstorm and were threatened by a pack of wild dogs along the way.

But most important—they made it. Last week the pair, both New York City College students, reached Golden Gate Bridge. Passing a wine bottle between the two, they exchanged celebration swigs and pushed their bikes across the bridge.

"That was an ecstatic moment," Perry said.

Relaxing on the back porch of the Pitt home, they were asked by The Times if they would do it again.

"I really don't know," Perry said.

How were they treated by people along the way?

"Absolutely beautiful," Perry beamed. "That's the thing that surprised us. We've both lived in New York City all our lives and we're not used to that."

They said total strangers gave them money, food and places to stay along the way. Both reached in their pockets and pulled out silver dollars, given to them by a man in Pennsylvania.

Sioux Indians at the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota asked them "to stay and work with them," Nelson said, noting the Indians offered them jobs in a reservation construction business.

The two New York City men politely refused but stayed with the South Dakota Indians for a one-week rest, during which they were threatened by a pack of wild dogs.

"I woke up one night and heard this howling around the tent," Nelson said. "I looked outside and all I could see was shining eyes and glistening teeth." By morning the dogs had disappeared. The Indians said the dogs run wild in packs in the hills above the reservation and come down in packs occasionally to kill livestock in the area.

"It was just like the wild west," Nelson said.

Other trip memories included pedalling up a 30-mile long grade to cross a 9000-foot pass in Wyoming's Big Horn Mountains.

They also experienced 110-degree heat in western Idaho and eastern Oregon—but five days later they pedalled through a 34-degree snowstorm near Crater Lake.

"We wrapped our hands in plastic to keep them warm," Nelson said.

Averaging 60 miles per day and a speed of 15 miles per hour, the two reached San Mateo August 25. They had mapped their route to avoid large cities. "We went from New York City through New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, South Dakota, Idaho, Oregon and here we are," Nelson said.

"We were right on schedule," he added, noting they planned to arrive here sometime in late August or early September.

"We feel like we're in shape now," he said, grinning.

They were repeatedly offered rides by motorists along their 3200-mile journey but "we never accepted any rides," Nelson said. "If we had accepted one ride it would have spoiled the whole thing.

"In a car you wouldn't get one-fiftieth out of the cross-country trip," he added. "On a bike you feel every bump in the road, smell ever smell and hear all the sounds." Nelson said he has crossed the country several times by car, but said it took a bike pedalling trip "to really get to know America—and I really know America now."

Both are converted bicyclists. Perry said, "When I think of going somewhere now, I think of using my bike."

"I have no plans of buying a car—I'll use my bike," Nelson added.

The trip was inexpensive—Perry spent $350 on food and bike parts while Nelson spent $310.

Both want to "try and settle here." Perry, a psychology graduate would like to get a job working in a mental hospital. Nelson, an oceanography student, would like to find employment in a related field.

They both say their recently completed trip "is just the beginning." The two are now contemplating another bike trip—this one longer—either through Canada, South America, Europe or Africa.

As the interview neared an end, Perry's uncle walked onto the porch and commented:

"I wish I had done something like that when I had their kind of legs."

"You can," they both replied in unison.

Bus Service For Canada Students

Redwood City bus service to and from Canada College every half-hour during the day will be provided by the municipal transit system, it was announced last week.

The runs are scheduled to begin on the opening day of fall semester, Monday, September 11.

"We're delighted the city has decided to resume this service," said William Walsh, Canada dean of students. "Availability of buses will enable many people without cars to take advantage of our educational opportunities and will also mean people with cars won't have to drive them unless they want to."

Buses heading to the campus, near the west end of Farm Hill Boulevard, will depart from the Southern Pacific railroad station in downtown Redwood City every 30 minutes, starting at 7:30 a.m. and continuing to 3 p.m.

Returning buses will leave the campus every 30 minutes, starting at 7:45 a.m. and continuing to 3:15 p.m.

En route stops both ways will be made at El Camino and Jefferson, Jefferson and Hudson, Jefferson and the Alameda.

Fare will be 25 cents. The service will be provided only on days when Canada College is in session.

Long Supports Financial Accountability by Officials

Legislation on the state level similar to a current effort in Congress to pass legislation which would force Congressmen to publicly account each year for the amounts and source of all their income in excess of $100 is favored by Assembly candidate Ted Long, a San Bruno attorney.

The proposed Congressional legislation would include gifts, fees and certain income producing transactions.

"I feel that the people of the state have every right to know who the financial backers are who try to affect legislators through political donations," said Long.

"I am particularly concerned," said Long, "because my opponent (Lou Papan), a Daly City real estate broker, refuses to disclose the names of his contributors, when in fact he has received large financial contributions from Foremost-McKesson, Doelger, Dean and Dean, and other large real estate development interests.

"I feel that the people have a right to know, especially when this type of goodwill carries with it the implied promise that the candidate will try to protect the vested interests of these contributors when he gets into office.

"It is only through full disclosure of the source of income that truly open and honest government by the people may be achieved. Such proposals go hand in hand with my long-advocated position of public debate between candidates to assure a full understanding of their positions.

"Unfortunately, this is another area of disagreement between my opponent and myself," said Long.

To prove his point that money not only influences but puts candidates into office, Long referred to a recent statement by Secretary of State Jerry Brown in which Brown said "The candidate who spent the most money, with few exceptions, won the June (primary) elections."

An analysis of San Mateo County would seem to prove that statement correct, except in the case of Long. He gained the nomination against a party favorite, spent only one-third the amount of his June opponent and only one-seventh as much as his November opponent, Daly City Realtor Lou Papan.

Papan spent over $35,000, as compared to Long's $5,000.

Since the primary election Long has challenged Papan to debate and to refrain from plastering the county with billboards and junk literature.

Long has also continually leveled charges that Papan has "sold out" to special interest by accepitng campaign financing from real estate development interests.

Papan has refused to debate Long and says of his acceptance of financial aid, "These people cannot buy my vote, they are only interested in good government."

"I don't believe it," said Long. "Foremost-McKesson's view of good governments is 30,000 to 40,000 homes on San Bruno Mountain, without any regard for future sewerage and solid waste planning, disregard for Colma Creek flooding and Bayshore traffic jams."

"Nick Gust has only one interest — that of further development of the Coastside and unneeded growth of coastal areas.

"The population of San Mateo County only increased by one-half of 1 per cent last year, or about 500 people. It's time we started directing our attention to the solution of our environmental problems and stopped feeling sorry for the developers and other polluters," said Long.

"Papan bought the primary as Jerry Brown indicated, and he is going to try and buy the general election," charged Long. "If not, why won't he agree to no signs and to a series of TV debates?" asked Long.

Peninsula 'Y' Job Center

The Peninsula YMCA in San Mateo has a Youth Employment Center underway to serve high school students on the Peninsula.

Most of these students are not old enough to be accepted by businesses. Adults in the community who need young people to wash windows, baby sit, type, take care of lawns etc. are urged to phone the Y.

The Employment Center is run by volunteers between the hours of 2—5 p.m. weekdays. Adult volunteers are also needed to run the Center.

SMJC Board Backs State Proposition 7

The Board of Trustees of the San Mateo Junior College District meeting last week at Canada College passed a resolution urging support for Proposition 1 on the November 7 ballot which is a bond issue for $160,000,000 in construction funds for the state's junior colleges.

The board indicated that the future needs of the local district might need funds from such a bond issue. Should enrollment justify the need, the local board felt that the district would have need for these matching construction funds. Both Canada and Skyline College are in need of aquatic facilities. Neither school has a swimming pool. The bond issue, should it pass, might realize $650,000 towards construction of the pools, and $1,600,000 in needed funds for a vocational technical building at Canada and an instructional building at Skyline.

Board President Eleanore Nettle urged passage of the bond issues, stating that not only would it be helpful to the local district but to every junior college in the state. Over 85 per cent of all lower division students in the state are now attending junior college campuses.

Burglar Flees Mateo Home

A burglar trapped inside the bathroom of a San Mateo Highlands home last week escaped by sliding down a two-story drainpipe despite efforts of the family, an FBI agent who lives next door, a sheriff's dog team and the sheriff's helicopter to capture him.

John B. Leddy, 50, a manufacturers representative, reported to Deputies Douglas Newton and Robert Poynter that his family returned to their home at 1860 Parrott drive after visiting friends in Lafayette in the East Bay.

When his son, William, entered the home he found a rear door open and heard a noise in the master bedroom. When he entered the room, the son saw the bathroom door, which had been slightly ajar, close. The son tried to kick in the door, his father reported, but the burglar had locked it.

Mrs. Leddy ran next door to call Joseph Weslich, an FBI agent. The son heard the bathroom window break, however, and the suspect lowering himself two stories to the ground.

Leddy said he had left the house unlocked because of two dogs inside the house. The dogs, however, were found locked in the kitchen. The two deputies searched a drainage ditch behind the home, but Newton noticed a car speeding down Parrott drive at 50 to 60 miles per hour, running a stop sign.

S.C. Man Is Wounded

An 18-year-old San Carlos man was rushed to Chope General Hosiptal late yesterday with a bullet wound near his right knee after a .44-caliber western-type revolver went off in Bemont.

Investigating Belmort police said the victim, Patrick Robert Montgomery, 18, 27 Pepper Lane, San Carlos, was riding in a truck and had wrapped the gun in a jacket. It went off when he laid it down as the truck neared the Ralston Avenue, Alamda de las Pulgas intersotion.

He told officers he had clearned the gun last night and thought it was unloaded.

Montgomery, an EB Janitorial Service employ, was riding in a company truck with a woman and another man and was enroute to the Belmont Police Station when the mishap occurred, Sgt. Pat Moran noted.

Mother Dies In Peninsula Bridge Crash

The mother of three young children was killed in a Dumbarton bridge accident at dawn Sunday, a Redwood City police car and a sports car were demolished in another early morning accident, and two persons were injured on the Bayshore freeway in San Mateo last night.

Pronounced dead on arrival at the Washington Township hospital in Fremont after her auto, westbound on the Dumbarton bridge approach at 5:30 a.m., spun out of control and skidded into the east bound lanes to be slammed into broadside by another vehicle was Mrs. Merle Lawyer, about 30, of Palo Alto, the mother of three young children.

Highway Patrolman Gene Gunter reported Mrs. Lawyer's car went into a broadslide skid in the vicinity of the KGO radio transmitter and was struck by an eastbound car driven by Lester Fau, 48, of 293 Hillview Avenue, Redwood City, who was taken to the hospital with a deep lip laceration, a possible fracture of the right arm and bruises.

The wreckage of the two autos was smashed into by an auto driven by Michael H. Fargo, 22, of Palo Alto, who was taken to the Kaiser Foundation hospital in Fremont with a deep head laceration and possible head injuries.

Officers said firemen had to be called to free Mrs. Lawyer's body from her demolished car, and that eastbound lanes of the old bridge, scheduled to be replaced, were closed for 45 minutes.

Redwood City Officer Joseph F. Kirby, 24, escaped injury, when his patrol car and a sports car driven by Duane L. Burke, 28, collided on El Camino Real at Oak street in Redwood City as Kirby was answering a prowler call at 1:30 a.m.

Witnesses said Burke made a left turn in front of the northbound police vehicle. Burke told Officer Jack Poe he did not see the oncoming police car.

Taken to Sequoia hospital for emergency treatment were Reserve Officer Richard E. Hurley, 28; Burke, and Danny S. Lorez, 21, of Berkeley, who was later transferred to the Kaiser Foundation hospital. All escaped with minor injuries, however.

Mrs. Thelma Louise Yates, 32, of 1727 Church Avenue, San Mateo, and Javier Rojas Carrion, 24, of Brawley, were taken to Chope Community hospital with injuries shortly before 11 p.m. after their autos collided on the Bayshore freeway at Kehoe Avenue in San Mateo. A third car driven by Calvin R. Willis, who was 21 years yesterday and who lives at 533 Green Avenue, San Bruno, hit Carrion's auto after the original impact.

Highway Patrolman L. R. Osborne reported Mrs. Yates came onto the freeway from the Kehoe onramp, crossed all northbound lanes of traffic, struck the divider strip, spun around, and was hit by Carrion's vehicle.

Man Beaten, Robbed Near Police Station

San Mateo police have reported that a long-haired white youth Friday night accosted two men as they arrived at a restaurant parking lot a block from the police station, held them up at gunpoint, then slugged the passenger when he told him he had no money.

The suspect appeared at 10:30 p.m. in the Delaware street lot as the two were getting out of their van, they told police, and jumping into the auto, said, "Good evening gentlemen. Give me your money."

The passenger, Vincent P. Sturla, of Palo Alto, told him he had no money.

"Don't lie to me," the suspect said. Then he hit Sturla on the forehead with the .38 calibre weapon, knocking him partially unconscious. As Sturla fell, he pushed him to the rear of the van, and went through his pockets.

There was only small change. He left it lying there.

Turning to the driver, Randy Searl of Palo Alto, he said, "give me your money." Searl gave him his wallet. The gunman removed $70, returned the wallet and left the van.

Searl, not knowing he was so close to the police department, drove to Stanford University Hospital to procure treatment for Sturla.

Police said the suspect appeared high on drugs. He was described as about 25 years old, six feet tall, 180 pounds, with long brown hair, and wearing dark clothing.

R.C. Planners Hear Report On Leslie Bid

Potential development of the Redwood Peninsula, between Belmont and Steinberg sloughs east of Marine World, was discussed in tentative terms this week by the development company that holds as option on the land.

Wolf Thiersch, planning coordinator, and Niel Smith, project manager of Mobil Estates Ltd., appeared before the Redwood City Planning Commission and a large audience of interested citizens to discuss what they might do if they pick up their option from Leslie Properties, current owner of the land.

Discussion last night centered on physical environment of the site and concepts of how it should be utilized. According to the developers, old slough areas would be used for non-building development such as roads and waterways. They also indicated that a marina could be constructed on the north side for powerboats and sailboats.

Another project calls for a 150-acre shopping center.

Although not specific about construction, Thierson and Smith indicated that their company was interested in as much commercial and industrial development as possible with residential construction in clusters bounded by the small waterways. There was no projection of density.

Public reaction was generally favorable, with Pat Barrentine, of the Committee for Green Foothills commenting that it would have been better if the whole Redwood Shores project had been started along these lines from the beginning.

Concerns of the public included access, taxes, the airport, industrial property placement, improvement of the Ralston Avenue interchange and assessment practices.

The developers indicated that they will discuss other aspects of possible plans in future meetings with the planners and public.

Boy Injured In Accident

William Doherty, 13, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Doherty of 3738 Farm Hill Boulevard, Redwood City, was critically injured in a freak bicycle accident, Redwood City police have reported.

The boy was coming down a hill when the left handlebar of his bicycle caught onto a street sign in front of 3530 Jefferson Avenue, flinging the youth off and into a utility poles.

Revolver Is Found

For the second time within six days, custodians discovered a revolver lying in the same stall of a women's restroom in the ground floor of the old County Courthouse in Redwood City.

Along with other county buildings in Redwood City, the old courthouse has been placed under strict security measures by county officials.

On Monday at 8:30, Charles N. Basile, 23, of Redwood City, a janitor, reported to Deputies Robert Carnevale and Dennis Bentley he found a .22 calibre high standard Derringer on a toilet seat cover. Six days ago, Redwood City Officer Robert Auld reported, a .38 calibre Iver Johnson revolver was found at exactly the same location.

Decision Due On New Site For Education

It will be at least next February 14 before the County Board of Education makes a decision on acquisition of a new site for its outdoor education program.

Revelation that the board is considering acquisition of a 180-acre site somewhere near La Honda touched off a furor at the board of supervisors last month, with supervisors expressing shock that the school budget contains $300,000 for the contemplated land purchase while there are thousands of acres of county park land nearby.

At its meeting this week, the board of education began the process of finaliing sggested additions to the outdoor education program, with the word going out to the various districts which use the program to submit in writing what they are willing to support in the way of activities.

It will be necessary to determine needs and uses before a final decision can be made on what type of site is needed and before engineering is undertaken to determine feasibility of possible sites.

The board of education is anxious to expand the popular program, which presently is conducted at the Jones Gulch YMCA Camp. Some 4100 fifth and sixth grade pupils from schools throughout the county participated in the program during the past year. School officials would like to accommodate about three times that many students, possibly even expanding the program to high schools.

Supervisors Save E.P.A. Program

The San Mateo County Board of Supervisors voted to grant the County Redevelopment Agency $80,000 Thursday to save the East Palo Alto neighborhood development program.

Henry Anthony, a member of the East Palo Alto Municipal Council, appeared before the board to urge the action, stating that without the appropriation the Redevelopment Agency stands to lose matching federal funds, placing the program in "jeopardy of being lost to the community."

It all has come about, Anthony said, when the Superior Court ruled out the proposed Belle Haven-East Palo Alto drainage program, leaving the county without its share of matching funds or project work.

"If the board fails to act at this time it will be a tremendous loss to the community," Anthony stated.

Supervisor James V. Fitzgerald, who had some questions concerning the expenditure when the matter was brought up last month, said in moving for approval of the funding that he now "knows the details."

Supervisor Robert St. Clair, seconding the approval, said:

"We have a human investment in East Palo Alto, we shouldn't let it fail at this time."

The development program probably will require another $52,000 next year if the court decision on the drainage program is not reversed.

Neat Burglars Steal Rug

Mrs. Johanna B. Wenrick, 39, of 505 Summit Springs Road, Woodside reported the sheriff's office that a burglar who took a $1000 Persian rug from a breakfast room in her house and stole an Ocelet fur coat valued at $2000 may have a strange sense of humor.

When she returned home after being away from the weekend, Mrs. Wenrock said that the burglars who removed the Persian rug had carefully placed back tables and chairs on their exact locations on the bare floor.

Boy Steals Purse, Flees

A 13-year-old boy, about four-feet, 10-inches tall and weighing around 90 pounds, escaped after grabbing the purse of a 79-year-old woman as she and a woman friend, 67, were walking down a private driveway between East O'Keefe Street and Donohoe Avenue in East Palo Alto, Saturday.

New Christian School Formed

A new interdenominational Christian school for students from kindergarten through grade six has been organized in Redwood City.

Approximately 130 students are expected to be registered at "Peninsula Christian Schools," when classes begin September 14 at the Assembly of God Church, 1305 Middlefield Road.

Mrs. Linnea Hanke, newly appointed principal, said the "school is separate from the church" even though an agreement has been reached between the new school administrators and the church over use of church classrooms and facilities.

The school was organized because "there are many people in this area who want their children to have an alternative to public education," said Mrs. Hanke. She noted that there are 275 Christian schools in California and another 35 new ones being formed this fall.

At least four teachers have been contracted for the coming school term, according to Mrs. Hanke who noted they are non-clergy, certified and experienced teachers.

An added feature of the new school is child care service, available for one-and-one-half hours before school begins in the morning and for almost three hours in the afternoon after classes end.

Child care service is primarily "for parents who work," said Mrs. Hanke, noting those parents can keep their children at the school until they finish work.

"Tuition at the school is very low," according to Mrs. Hanke. The rate decreases for each additional child a family registers at the school. Student transportation to and from the school must be provided by the parents.

A temporary school board has been organized. Bill Redman of San Carlos has been appointed temporary board chairman. Other members are Rosalyn Mellenthin, Rosemary Anderson and Bob Peoples, all of Sunnyvale, Ralph Neuling of Hillsborough, Bob Clark of Menlo Park and Roger Sealy of San Carlos.

The goal of the school is "to bring Jesus to these students and educate them in a superior manner," according to Mrs. Hanke who said facilities could accommodate as many as 300 students.

Testing and enrolling of students will be September 11. More information is available by calling the school.

Bruno Jail Inmates End Fast

About 400 inmates at the San Francisco County Jail near San Bruno have ended a weekend protest over food, says Sheriff Richard Hongisto.

Hongisto said the prisoners, who had refused their meals since noon Friday, ended their demonstration Sunday evening.

"There was a lot of noise but there was no violence and no threats of violence," he said, terming the protest "the mildest I've seen since I've been sheriff."

Hongisto said improvements in the food at San Bruno have lagged behind county jail facilities in San Francisco. He blamed local supervisors for denying him funds to hire a qualified chef or dietician.

"The supervisors have consistently refused to go along with me on this even though it's required by state law in order to maintain minimum standards for a jail of our size," he said.

D.C. Planner In Rebuttal

Daly City city planner John Walker said Friday he had no knowledge of any city in the State lifting its urgency zoning ordinance to permit temporary building.

Walker's statement was issued in the wake of published reports that there have been cases were the emergency zoning ordinance in redevelopment areas has been set aside and variances granted to property owners.

"To my knowledge this has never been done," Walker said.

He said such information might give local property owners, whose lands are now frozen in R-1 zoning while a redevelopment study is underway, "a wrong impression."

The report was in connection with the city council denying a variance to a Daly City businessman who wanted to open a car paint shop in the urgency zoned area for a two-year period.

By a 3-2 vote the council denied the request.

Auto Crash Fatal to San Brunan

Mrs. Vivian H. Nilsen, 48, 125 Lake Drive, San Bruno, died September 4 as a result of an auto accident on Highway 89 near Quincy. A native of Wyoming, she had lived in San Bruno for the past four years and was regional manager for a jewelry company in Northern California.

Survivors include two sons, Ronald and David, and one daughter, Rosanne, all of San Bruno. She is also survived by her mother, four sisters and two brothers, all of Seattle.

Funeral services were conducted Friday at 7 p.m. at Holy Family Catholic Church in Citrus Heights, near Sacramento. Burial will follow at Mount Calvary Cemetery near Sacramento.

AIRMAN THEODORE P. Grover, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip L. Grover of 1527 Madeira Drive, Pacifica, has been assigned to Sheppard AFB, Tex at the Technical Training Center for specialized training in aircraft maintenance. A 1971 graduate of Terra Nova High School, he also attended Skyline College, San Bruno.

EXERCISE

Marine Lance Corporal Larry G. Ackerman, son of Mr. Lyle Ackerman of 1233-A Lerida Way, and husband of the former Linda D. Marioni of 1136 De Solo Drive, both of Pacifica, participated in "Exotic Dancer Five," a joint-service amphibious assault training exercise at Camp Lejeune, N.C., and the waters off shore.

Campaign Contributions Still An Issue With Candidate Long

Long recently challengd Papan to renounce those contributions as being "special interest" related.

"Persons who own large quantities of land, such as Foremost-McKesson, do not in my opinion make large financial contributions for any reason other than to influence legislation," said Long.

Papan's reply was that Long's words were "insults directed at the integrity of every person who runs for public office."

"Apparently Long can't see that people may contribute money to a candidate of their choice in the interests of maintaining good government," said Papan.

"No People with major interest do not make financial contributions in the interest of good government," says Long.

"Papan has attempted to explain away thousands of dollars of contributions, most of which was received from developers and sources out of the district, by accusing me of insulting persons who run for public office," said Long.

"I can assure Mr. Papan that I will continue to do so until the public is free from the influence of these interests. I made it clear in the primary that you do not need thousands of dollars to win elections," said Long.

"To avoid that in November I offered to debate my opponent. He chooses to hide behind his bank account, giving as reason that I have little money.

"I believe that people are tired of this kind of politics. They are tired of seeing our environment destroyed by those people who escape penalty by financing campaigns," charged Long.

"I ask the public to decide if it is proper for a candidate to accept financial support from sources for which he will be making major decisions. For this is what Mr. Papan has done.

"As a real estate broker I am sure that many of these people are his personal friends, as he has indicated. This is all the more reason not to accept their financial support," said Long.

Long also said that a letter sent to Papan suggesting a debate was not returned unopened as earlier reported. "He got my letter all right," said Long, "he continues to pretend like nothing has happened."

Free Meals For the Needy

The Jefferson Union High School District will provide free meals to needy children whose families qualify under the eligibility scale.

Notices regarding the availability of free meals were sent to all parents, but in the event a family did not receive an application form one may be secured at the school.

Should an application be refused for any reason, residents should feel free to appeal to the district superintendent, who will arrange a hearing before an impartial official, according to Dr. Robert Watt, assistant superintendent — business.

APPOINTED

Andy McKeown, former owner of the McKeown Realty Company in Burlingame and a 20-year resident of Hillsborough, was recently appointed general manager of the Coloma Realty Company's Coloma office in El Dorado County.
